'Dream come true': Beebe Ranch bought by museum

BY CLARA VAUGHN

Eastern Shore Post

Visitors to Chincoteague Island should soon be able to tour the Beebe ranch made famous by Marguerite Henry's 1947 novel "Misty of Chincoteague."

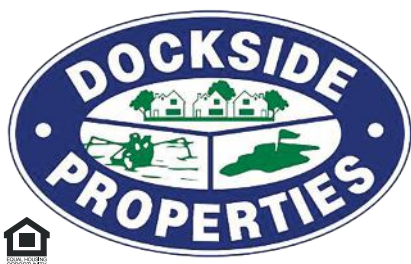

The Museum of Chincoteague Island on Friday, June 30, purchased the ranch after more than 5,000 individuals donated the $625,000 needed to save the historic property.

"It was a dream come true," said Cindy Faith, executive director of the museum, of the grassroots effort to save the ranch on Ridge Road.

"I just am so grateful and it gives me goosebumps to think of how this has come together," she said. "I'm still completely blown away by the response."

The Beebe Ranch became well-known through Henry's novel, but Clarence and

Starting the Conversation

How to talk to a loved one about senior living

It can be worrisome when you have an elderly loved one living alone. You may wonder if they are safe. Are they happy? Do they feel isolated? We encourage families to talk, make a plan early, and find a senior living community you all feel comfortable with, rather than being forced to make a decision in an emergency.

Tips for starting the conversation

- Remind your loved one that you love them and are worried about their well-being.
- Ask what would need to happen for them to decide it was time to move.
- Discuss their thoughts about senior living and what they would like to see in a community.

Commonwealth Senior Living has been guiding families on this journey for more than 20 years and we would be honored to help yours too.

Andrews files for Northampton School Board

An Exmore man has announced his candidacy for the Northampton County School Board.

Joe Andrews has announced his candidacy for the at-large seat on the Northampton County School Board.

Andrews and his wife, Claudia, both Virginia natives, moved to Exmore in 2019 after “falling in love with the area during frequent camping and vacation trips to the Eastern Shore for many years,” he said.

Andrews made the decision to enter the race to bring his experience and expertise in business management to the operation of the Northampton County schools.

Recently retired, Andrews has been the director of an industrial equipment sales and service organization for the past five years, with prior service as a state employee and Northrop

Ag Showcase set for UMES on Aug. 16

Small- and large-scale farmers can learn the latest about farm equipment and operations technology, soil management, and crop production and diversification at a free Ag Showcase on Aug. 16 at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore in Princess Anne, Md.

UMES Extension and Atlantic Tractor LLC have partnered for the third consecutive year for the full-day event taking place at the university's 365-acre research, extension, and teaching farm on Stewart Neck Road in Princess Anne beginning at 9 a.m.

"Atlantic Tractor will once again feature its popular interactive operations tech center and bring state-of-the-art agricultural equipment for display and demonstration," said Berran Rogers, UMES Extension's Small Farm Program coordinator.

"This year's farm tours will highlight seed and fungicide treatments for soybeans. Extension subject matter specialists will be on hand to share ongoing research on over 35 alternative crops, including herbs, small fruits, and ethnic vegetables, all of which are increasing in consumer demand."

Agricultural exhibitors and vendors will be on site to showcase their products and services, Rogers added. In addition, educational activities for youth will be available, so families are welcome.

Pre-registration for general admission is required by Aug. 11 by visiting www.umes.edu/extension/events

The event is free and includes lunch sponsored by Mountaire Agri-Business. Contact smallfarms@umes.edu for more information, or to request special accommodations, email Crystal Sankar, program management specialist for UMES' Small Farm Program, at cjsankar@umes.edu, or call 410-621-5450, Ext. 101.

Vendors are welcome and must register at the link above by Aug. 7. Vendor registration is $100 and includes one general admission ticket, a table, and name recognition.

SERVING VIRGINIA'S EASTERN SHORE

THE PAPER'S POSITION

High hopes for our two new school superintendents

School boards in Northampton and Accomack counties each hired new school superintendents in the past six months. They have big jobs ahead. We have high hopes for their impact on our communities.

While magic happens daily in every classroom on the Eastern Shore, learning losses from the COVID-19 pandemic have challenged every school system. A lack of workforce housing makes recruiting new educators difficult. Our new school leaders will be on the vanguard of finding creative, impactful solutions for these issues.

The realities of public education, always in flux, are changing even more rapidly. Our schools have an increasing population of immigrants and special education students. The new superintendents will take special care to ensure everyone, from every background, has an opportunity for a first-class education.

Offerings for high school students should continue to blossom with even more college credit courses and workforce credentials available. Few school systems in the country have amenities like the NASA Wallops Flight Facility and Virginia Space in their backyards. Our new superintendents will develop Wallops internships and programming for students.

A superintendent is a face-of-the-system leader. Our new superintendents will be exceptionally well-connected to our business and civic community, securing partnerships and generating goodwill, one handshake at a time.

Finally, our superintendents will be master motivators — of educators, staffs, students, parents, and communities. They will be change agents and thought leaders, knowledgeable about cutting-edge trends. Their enthusiasm will be genuine and infectious. Their words and actions will increase the public esteem in our school systems.

We look forward to seeing their impressive results.

How to keep deer out of your garden

BY PAM WILEY

Guest columnist

Hardly any plant is off limits to deer, but gardeners can employ a few techniques to help keep them away from summer gardens.

Familiar with human activity, perceptive deer observe behaviors that enable them to work around deterrents.

While there aren't many foolproof ways to keep deer out for good — aside from 10-foot-high fences — homeowners can angle a shorter fence 45 degrees to give an illusion of a higher one or install two 5-foot-high fences 4 feet apart.

"Deer don't have the ability to estimate distance correctly, so the fences will look closer and higher than they actually are," said Kirsten Ann Conrad, a Virginia Cooperative Extension agriculture and natural resources agent in Arlington.

"They won't risk getting caught between the two fences, so they're less likely to jump."

While not everyone can invest in fences, and some localities may not allow it, gardeners also can try non-toxic deer repellents.

"These sprays are generally effective if they're applied early and frequently," Conrad said.

"If deer learn to avoid your landscape because the treated plants don't taste good, they'll continue to avoid your property even after you've stopped spraying."

Deer can get accustomed to repellents so it's best to rotate between different types.

Ultimately, if a deer is desperate, a repellent may not keep it away.

Man's best friend also can help, as neighborhoods with many dogs frequently have fewer deer.

"If you have either a dog on a tether or within a fenced area, their presence and activity may reduce the likelihood of deer coming," said Jim Parkhurst, associate professor in Virginia Tech's Department of Fish and Wildlife Conservation.

Parkhurst explained that deer are frequently attracted to showy plants people cultivate in gardens, including Asiatic lilies, hostas, some azaleas, and roses.

"We always refer to these as the Dove chocolates of the deer world," he said.

While no plant is truly deer-resistant, there are some they don't prefer. Native plants

When parking, do you pull in frontward or back in backward?

There are two types of people, I've found.

Some of them pull in frontward when they park a vehicle, as I do.

Others back in backward, with the front of the vehicle looking out.

Ted Shockley

By and large, these are habitual actions — those back-in-backward boys always back in backward, as if they were following a court order.

Some pull-in frontward people, like me, are usually in a real or perceived hurry and don't have time to fool around with backing into a parking spot.

I am always running late and feel taking the time to back in backwards would make me even later.

But in recent years, I have developed a case of back-in backward parking envy.

I have studied those back-in-backward boys. They seem focused and squared away.

I drive through parking lots and look at the backed-in vehicles. I wonder what their drivers know that I don't.

I have concluded from my own observations that back-in-backward people are generally more particular about the little things.

Perhaps there are obsessive-compulsive tendencies associated with backing in backward.

Back-in-backward drivers also have some vehicular standards — their cars and trucks tend to be cleaner and showier than mine.

I do not know why or how this translates into backing in backward, but it does.

They park like they could be urgently needed, at a moment's notice, to drive to a specific location. They park as if they might need to speed off.

This could never apply to me, for I am never urgently needed for much of anything, thank goodness.

In fact, if there is an urgent situation, I'm the last person you want there, most folks agree.

Some back-in-backward people seem more organized than pull-in-frontward people like me.

They don't mistakenly lose their house keys in Georgia, like I did. (My keys were found six months later by an observant cousin-in-law, thank goodness.)

I'd bet the back-in-backward boys even manage keep up with their driver's license, too. I lose mine for days at a time.

I even know some back-in-backwards boys who go through the trouble of backing into parking places in their home garages.

Maybe they sense they might have to leave home in a hurry.

All of that said, you can imagine my surprise when I read the American Automobile Association advises drivers to back into parking spots or to pull their vehicles through.

This does not apply to angled parking, in which drivers should follow the flow of traffic.

AAA said backing in backwards is safer for everyone — because reversing out of a space puts pedestrians at risk.

It also said roughly 75% of people are like me — they incorrectly pull in frontward.

But the vehicle actually should be facing out to help with visibility and safety.

So there's a good reason why I should aspire to become one of the back-in-backwards people.

I'd even go out and park correctly right now — if I could find my car keys.

like mountain laurel, cinquefoil, Virginia bluebells and wild bleeding hearts are less susceptible to deer damage and help beautify landscapes.

Finally, unpredictability is key. Deterrents like wind chimes, spinners and other objects are helpful when moved around in the garden.

"The more you keep them off guard, you move it, you change its location, you take it down for 2-3 days then put it back somewhere else," the more effective it will be, Parkhurst said.

It's a lot of work for the homeowner, he admitted, but that unpredictability will help keep a garden safe.

Moving schedule is announced for new library

After 58 years of service at the Accomac location, the Eastern Shore Public Library's collection and staff will be moving to the Eastern Shore of Virginia Regional Library and Heritage Center on Bennett Street in Parksley later this summer, according to Joyce Holland, chairwoman of the library board of trustees.

"We look forward to beginning the actual move in early August," said Holland. "We share the community's excitement about the facility's long-awaited opening."

While planning for the move has been ongoing, there is still much work to be done before the library opens the doors of its new home.

The library will be closed for about three weeks in order to move the library collections and staff to the new facility.

"It's a big job," said Miranda Wisor, library system director, "and all steps in the process must be planned very carefully."

The Front Street building in Accomac will be closed to the public beginning Aug. 7.

Due dates for borrowed materials will be extended to accommodate the planned reopening in Parksley on Aug. 26.

Library patrons can still return borrowed items to the outdoor book drop in Accomac until Aug. 26.

The regional library will house the new Heritage Center, which boasts historical and genealogical records from the Eastern Shore dating back hundreds of years.

Also, the new facility will offer enhanced program spaces, study spaces, and new technologies.

"Libraries need to grow and change with their community and this building will offer that opportunity, which is so important," said Wisor.

James Arnold

Mr. James Allen Arnold, 94, passed away on January 7, 2023, in Austin, Texas, surrounded by family. He was born on May 11, 1928, in Franktown, to Herbert Manning (H.M.) Arnold and Hilda Fox Arnold. After graduating from Northampton High School, Jim enlisted in the U.S. Air Force, where he was stationed at Carswell Air Force Base in Ft. Worth, Texas. He met the love of his life, Georgia Speliotis Arnold, a nurse in the Air Force, and they were married in 1952.

After leaving the Air Force, Jim spent the rest of his career at Texas Instruments in Richardson, Texas. He and Georgia raised their two children in Garland, Texas, where they were active members of St. David's Episcopal Church and made lifelong friendships.

Jim and Georgia loved the Eastern Shore of Virginia and seasonally retired there beginning in 1994, before permanently moving there in 1998, where they enjoyed spending time with family and friends on the Chesapeake Bay. In Virginia, Jim and Georgia were active members of Hungars Episcopal Church in Northampton County.

He also volunteered with community ministries, especially Habitat for Humanity. Jim was an avid reader and fixer. His friends and family describe him as very kind and generous ("Mr. Wonderful") and someone who would do anything for anyone. A few of his favorite places were the Chesapeake Bay, New England, and Austin. He especially loved happy hour on his deck or down at Bayford.

Jim was adored by his grandchildren for many reasons, not the least of which was his positive outlook on life and his sense of humor. He was always engaged and interested in the lives of his family and was a delight to be around. One of his most frequent sayings was, "Tell me, what's new and exciting in your young life?" He had friends and admirers of all ages and is missed dearly.

He is survived by his daughter, Joanne Arnold Roberts and her husband, Ray Roberts, of Hillsboro, Texas; son, James Allen Arnold Jr. and his wife, Ellen Arnold, of Austin; five grandchildren, Jay Allen Arnold III, Blake Allen Roberts, Kathryn Kyler Arnold, Nicole Eva Bryant, and Kelly Marie Roberts; 11 great-grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews.

Jackie Wayne Justis

Mr. Jackie Wayne Justis, 83, of Coconut Creek, Fla., passed peacefully to his eternal home on June 13, 2023.

Born June 23, 1939, in Lee Mont and raised on the beautiful Eastern Shore of Virginia, Jackie was the son of Brantley and Willye Stephens Justis. Jackie spent his adventurous childhood in Parksley, biking around town, shooting pool, and tearing up the roads with his fast cars. He left his mark in that small town!

Mr. Justis

Jack was baptized and a member of Grace United Methodist Church. After a lifetime of traveling 49 states, he kept the values of his hometown upbringing yet never found a comparable crab cake or soft shell crab. He graduated from Parksley High School in 1957, lettering in football and basketball.

After one year at the University of Richmond, Jack served in the U.S. Army Reserves. He joined Chris-Craft Corporation in Salisbury, Md., eventually transferring to Pompano Beach, Fla., as customer service manager. His navigational skills as a licensed captain put him at the helm in their manufacturer publications.

In 1966, outside the infamous Elbo

Room at the corner of A1A and Las Olas Boulevard, he met the love of his life, Norma 'Toots' Lutt. On May 30, 1969, Jack and Toots were married in Ft. Lauderdale and enjoyed a beachside reception at the Yankee Clipper. Last month they celebrated their 54th anniversary.

Together they had two loving, devoted daughters, Jill Magill (William), of Marietta, Ga., and Bobbi Saylor (David), of Jensen Beach, Fla.; and four grandchildren, Jack (namesake) and Gracie Magill, of Georgia, and Bowen and Darren Saylor, of Florida.

Known to his grandchildren as 'Pop,' he enjoyed traveling to watch them participate in many activities and loved being a big part of their lives.

After retiring from Chris-Craft in 1977, Jack's talents as a craftsman emerged. He was a self-taught custom rod builder and major contributor to best selling books on the subject. Jack was well known as a pioneer for his artistry in thread designs. He took home 'Rod of the Show' first place awards in both salt and freshwater divisions at the national competition in 1984.

His invention and patent of the Zebco Rhino Rod grip was one of his proudest accomplishments. Together with Toots, he designed and built one-of-a-kind, Justis Billiard Cue Cases — the "Choice of Champions" for over 30 years. Jack was a master of his craft with a keen eye and steady hand. He was respected throughout the world for his quality workmanship and stood behind his products.

A lifelong hobby enthusiast, Jack's talents included being a photographer, competitive model sailboat racer, and the oldest member of the Bowling Stones. After a 50+ year running poker game with '8 Of A Kind,' on June 13 "Action Jackson" went ALL IN.

An avid fan of classic cars, he restored a 1955 Chevy Bel Air and received over 100 first place trophies, numerous 'Best of Show' awards, and the ultimate Antique Automobile Club of America Preservation Award.

Coast Guard rescues stranded pontoon boat

The Coast Guard assisted a disabled boat with five people aboard just after midnight Wednesday, July 5, near Mosquito Creek in Chincoteague Bay.

Coast Guard Sector Virginia watchstanders received a notification that a 21-foot pontoon boat reportedly suffered an engine casualty and needed assistance.

A Coast Guard Station Chincoteague 27-foot Shallow Water Special Purpose Craft boatcrew launched to assist the boaters, who were disabled in an area difficult to navigate.

“Our crew was able to get on scene with the pontoon, assess the operational picture and prevent the situation from deteriorating into something more severe,” said Senior Chief Petty Officer Conor Bennett, Station Chincoteague officer-in-charge.

“The Coast Guard recommends boaters take free boating safety courses, which are valuable to boaters of all experience levels. These courses cover a variety of topics like proper safety gear to have, boating traffic rules, and how to handle maritime emergencies just to name a few. The courses are available through multiple organizations throughout the nation, such as the Coast Guard Auxiliary.”

The station crew brought the boaters to their nearby campground with no reported injuries.

Ward’s Tires donates to Cancer Center

Thanks to the support of Ward’s Tires and the first annual Eastern Shore Show and Shine car show, patients at the Riverside Shore Cancer Center now have more access to assistance that helps them thrive while they battle cancer.

The car show in May raised more than $1,000 to help cancer patients with transportation and other obstacles that can jeopardize their treatment.

The event was organized by Parker and Amanda Ward of Ward’s Tires in honor of Chris Gibson and Parker’s uncle Chuck Ward, a former director of the Cancer Center who passed away in 2014 from cancer.

“Our Shore cancer patients directly benefit from the hard work of volunteers like Parker and Amanda,” said Sally Schreiber, director of community relations for Riverside Shore Memorial Hospital and the Riverside Shore Cancer Center.

“It is a special kind of thoughtfulness that the Wards were motivated to help people they have never met. And for those of us who knew and worked with Chuck Ward, it was so gratifying that he was memorialized in this way.”

Northampton teacher raises will average 7% this year

BY STEFANIE JACKSON
Eastern Shore Post

Northampton County Public Schools will give its teachers average raises of 7% this year, even if Virginia's state budget includes teacher raises of only 5%.

"The hope here is that additional state funds are forthcoming to cover ... the extra 2%, but if not, then the board of supervisors has committed to approving use of other funds that would fund that differential on a one-time basis," said Brook Thomas, Northampton schools' chief financial officer.

The Northampton School Board would be responsible for determining how to continue funding the additional 2% teacher raises in FY 2025 and beyond.

Northampton County supervisors approved last month the school division's fiscal year 2024 budget, which was based on Gov. Glenn Youngkin's proposed "skinny budget" for Virginia.

Because Virginia has a two-year state budget that runs through June of next year, the state continues to operate unencumbered even though the General Assembly failed to pass budget amendments for FY 2024 before the new fiscal year began July 1.

The budget under which Virginia currently operates includes the state's share of the cost of just a 5% raise for teachers.

The state budget does not include extra funding for at-risk students, those who are at risk of failure due to factors such as poverty.

The state budget does not include temporary funding for additional instructional assistants that Northampton would place in its middle school.

Neither does the state budget include a one-time funding distribution for Northampton and Accomack's public schools to help them provide competitive salaries for teachers.

Northampton supervisors approved the school division's total operating budget of nearly $31 million, which includes about $21 million for instruction.

Supervisors also approved "additional transactions" that needed the school board's approval, Thomas said.

Among them was a $1.9 million appropriation for the school capital improvement fund, from the additional 1% sales tax Northampton collects specifically for school construction projects and related debt service.

An $850,000 appropriation from the county's capital reserve fund was related to a U.S. Department of Agriculture grant that had been awarded for equipment at Northampton's high and middle schools and generators and medical equipment for the two elementary schools, Thomas said.

Northampton supervisors appropriated a payment of about $978,000 on the debt service for the high school and middle school modernization project.

Supervisors also included an appropriation of nearly $53 million, the current outstanding balance on the high school and middle school project and the work completed by ABM, a building maintenance company that specializes in energy efficiency.

The ABM project included the installation of new geothermal HVAC systems at Kiptopeke and Occohannock elementary schools.

The loans paying for these projects are in the form of bonds that were issued by the Virginia Public School Authority.

County supervisors' additions brought Northampton's total operating budget for FY 2024 to more than $88 million.

School budget items that are on hold while local officials await news on the state budget include: a second behavioral specialist for the school division, a second student mentor for Northampton High School, additional instructional assistants for grades 3 to 6, temporary funding for eight additional instructional assistants at Northampton Middle School, and expanded funding for dual-enrollment credits.

Flounder fishing improves with water clarity

Cobia action, especially among the larger fish, has waned slightly over the last week, possibly due to an early start of the summer spawning period. Good numbers of smaller fish remain available, at least for the time being. Anglers bait fishing for cobia are expecting to see an increase in the shark bycatch in the upcoming days.

Bill Hall

Upper Shore

Captain Matt Abell, at the Sea Hawk Sports Center, said that the Chesapeake Bay sheepshead bite has extended all the way up to the waters of Tangier Sound. These large members of the porgy family have been hitting crab baits fished on bottom rigs, as well as on sweeper-style jigs, tipped with chunks of crab and lowered down to submerged structures.

Abell said that the best sheepshead action seemed to occur around the tide changes. Schools of bluefish have taken up temporary residence around the Tangier target ships and the Watts Island rocks. These fish have been hitting cast Stingsilvers and Crippled Herring, as well as Rap-10's trolled around the structures.

Cobia fishing in the mid-bay was described as "fairly consistent" for anglers chumming and fishing chunks of menhaden on 7/0-9/0 hooks.

On the seaside, flounder fishing has improved with the water clarity. The best action has occurred from the last of the flood tide through the early stages of the ebb tide in the waters out near the inlets.

Berkley Gulp with silversides or live minnows drifted on a two-hook bottom rig have been the bait of choice. Nice-sized flounder have been pulled from the Blackfish Banks structures in the inshore ocean waters off Chincoteague.

Yellowfin tuna catches and a few white marlin releases have been made in the Washington and Norfolk Canyons.

The Assateague surf has produced catches of red drum and kingfish (whiting) according to Jimmy Vasiliou of Captain Steve's Bait and Tackle.

Wachapreague

Captain Lindsay Paul, aboard the Almost Persuaded, told me that the flounder fishing out of Wachapreague has "picked up" since the arrival of clear water.

He said that the best action has been occurring just after high tide on the first part of the ebb. Gulp/live minnows and squid/live minnows have been the most productive bait offerings.

Captain Paul added that black sea bass and flounder catches are coming from the inshore wrecks, while farther out in the blue water, scattered tuna, mahi, and a few marlin have been in the mix.

Lower Shore

Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle, described the recent lower bay cobia action as "decent," with anglers reporting a large number of juvenile fish in the 32- to 38-inch range.

Sight fishing with live eels has been the most successful technique over the last week, with the waters from Nautilus Shoal up to the area around Buoy 38 cited as some of the most productive locations.

Flounder action was described as “solid” along the bridge-tunnel and Fisherman Inlet bridge. The waters around the fourth island of the bridge-tunnel are still holding schools of spadefish. The bridge pilings have been producing a few sheepshead. Good numbers of sand mullet (whiting) are being caught over the Cabbage Patch and around the concrete ships, while the lower bay piers are seeing catches of small croaker, gray trout, and sand mullet.

Dan Bell, at Oceans East-Eastern Shore, also described the cobia fishing as “decent,” but added that the fish appear to have started pairing up for spawning. He said that the flounder bite is still excellent inside the Ditch and around the concrete ships, with some large fish being caught.

The spadefish population has now spread from the third and fourth islands of the bridge-tunnel all the way up to Plantation Light and the Occohannock Range Tower, with fish also increasing in size. Sand mullet (whiting) were described as plentiful between Cape Charles harbor and Plantation Creek. Spanish mackerel are being found along the bridge-tunnel, with trophy-sized red drum being caught and released around the span’s fourth island.

The writer was the first Eastern Shore resident to achieve Virginia Saltwater Master Angler status. He has been named Virginia Saltwater Angler of the Year and Virginia Saltwater Release Angler of the Year. He has won numerous Virginia Press Association awards for his columns.

Exmore will sue if sewer easements aren't signed

BY STEFANIE JACKSON
Eastern Shore Post

Exmore is serious about satisfying the requirements to receive funding for its sewer project, even if that means suing its residents.

"We're going to have to take our friends and neighbors and family to court ... this isn't vindictive or anything, it's just business," Exmore Town Manager Robert Duer told the Town Council on Monday, July 3.

State and federal funding for the sewer project is dependent on Exmore getting everyone in town connected to the new system, and before that, getting all homeowners to sign easements giving access to their property so town employees can service the system.

If all of the easements aren't signed and recorded in the Northampton County courthouse, "we're not going to get a dime," Duer said.

He said the sewer project will cost Exmore $1 million a month, and without loans and grants, the town could support the project for only three months.

To ensure that any potential lawsuit by the town will hold up in court, the town council voted to amend ordinance 220, which passed in May 2022.

Ordinance 220 requires that any residential, commercial, or industrial building on a street with a water and/or sewer main must connect to the system or systems.

The ordinance was passed with an effective date to be determined, but "the judge can't make folks sign up for an easement when (the date) is to be determined," said Director of Utilities Taylor Dukes.

The Town Council voted for an effective date of the same day, July 3, 2023.

Incident resolved

Dukes noted that an individual wastewater issue that town officials had discussed in June was resolved.

Last month, residents of Main Street had complained that wastewater from their neighbors' faulty septic system had been flowing onto their property for weeks.

Town officials guessed that the septic system was backed up with grease from the food truck that the neighbors had been operating in front of their residence.

Dukes had contacted the local health department prior to the June town council meeting, but the issue was not resolved immediately.

The day after the June meeting, the health department took action, and the septic tank was replaced.

Exmore officials wanted to prevent food trucks from dumping grease into the new sewer system and introduced some sample ordinances for the town council's review.

One was a Newport News city ordinance pertaining to the disposal of raw sewage, grease, and industrial waste. A violation of the ordinance is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine.

The town council recommended by consensus that if Exmore passes a similar ordinance, a violation should be a Class 3 misdemeanor with a fine up to $500 instead of a Class 4 misdemeanor with a fine up to $250.

The ordinance also would address the issue of raw sewage leaking onto a public road in town, Duer said.

He said Exmore must ensure no one dumps grease into the new sewer system, or the town could be sued by the Hampton Roads Sanitation District for the damage. HRSD is constructing the force main that will transport Exmore's sewage to the treatment plant in Onancock.

Food trucks

Another ordinance that was presented would regulate food trucks on private property in town.

The requirements to operate a food truck would include a health department permit, fire department report, and proof of liability insurance, Duer said.

In addition to obtaining a business license, a food truck operator would be required to submit an annual $100 user fee.

Dukes said the ordinances are necessary because food trucks are "not going to go away."

He said one entrepreneur had proposed creating a "food truck park" in town, and another who had closed his main business asked if a food truck could use his parking lot.

Mayor Douglas Greer raised concern about the disposal of grease from food trucks.

Exmore would not be responsible to receive the waste; the health department would designate an approved disposal site for the grease.

Dukes noted that regulation is necessary because Exmore's residential sewer connections will not be equipped to handle commercial or industrial waste.

Duer said town staff will present the ordinances for approval at a later date.

Beebe Ranch

Ida Beebe — known to most as Grandpa and Grandma Beebe — were prominent figures on Chincoteague before Henry ever visited the property.

The family owned more than 100 acres of pastureland on the island's southside, where Grandpa Beebe raised and sold his Chincoteague Ponies. The property dates back more than 100 years, Faith said.

"The Beebe Ranch and Clarence Beebe are just iconic parts of the island life," she said.

Beebe's reputation led Henry to his ranch in 1946, when she visited Chincoteague to collect stories for a book about the island's annual pony auction.

Henry published "Misty of Chincoteague" the next year, inspired by its namesake pony born on the Beebe ranch.

"It becomes this iconic book, but over time, things change," Faith said of the ranch. "Grandma and Grandpa Beebe pass away. They have a bunch of children ... and that land is divided up."

As the Beebe descendants moved off the island and sold their portions of the property, the family ranch dwindled in size. Today, the ranch is just 10.3 acres — but that small parcel played a crucial role in the legend of Misty.

"The last 10 acres are key components to the Misty stories" Faith said, recalling the Ash Wednesday Storm of 1962 that caused residents to evacuate the island.

"Misty rides out the storm in the kitchen of the house. That house is the house that has been preserved now," she said of the Beebe family home.

Plans for the future of the ranch include maintaining the property and its existing structures, as well as rebuilding the barn that burned down in 2019, Faith said.

Plans are still in the works but the museum intends to open the ranch as a visitors center in the spring for guests learn more about Misty and the Beebe family's history on Chincoteague.

In the meantime, the property continues to be a quiet, active farm with three ponies and a Quarter Horse, which Billy Beebe cares for every day.

"Now that we own it, we can apply for grants and see if it's possible to make it a historical site. So, there's a lot of planning going on," Faith said. "We have to protect the property now."

The fundraiser to save the Beebe ranch began conceptually last fall, when siblings Billy Beebe and Barbara Gray approached museum staff to let them know their plans to sell family property.

"They said, 'We don't want it to be developed. We don't want to sell it to somebody who's going to tear down the house and build a McMansion,'" Faith said.

As word spread, the family received an offer from a private developer to purchase the property for $625,000, she said.

"That's where the fundraiser came in," Faith said.

The museum announced its fundraiser to purchase the ranch in February and received a "whirlwind" of support from donors across the country and abroad, she said.

A GoFundMe page received over 2,200 donations, 2,000 donated to the cause through the museum website, and hundreds more mailed letters with checks to the museum, she said.

Local philanthropist David Landsberger gave $100,000 as part of a matching fundraiser challenge and the Chincoteague Volunteer Fire Company donated proceeds raised from a buy-back foal to help save the ranch.

"All the other donations were everything from kids coming in with $2 to people sending in checks for $1,000 or $5,000," Faith said.

Many donations came with a letter sharing individuals' connection to the ranch and story of Misty.

"The letters that we've received for this donation are a testament to how many people care about Eastern Shore living ... and the story of the kids and the love of a pony," Faith said.

Last Friday, she signed the paperwork for the museum to officially purchase the ranch with the Billy Beebe and Gray.

"Billy Beebe and his sister Barbara ... just before the signing were sitting down reminiscing. One of the things they said was their mother was in heaven watching down and must just be happy," Faith said.

"This was something that she always hoped for — that their property would be ... saved for the people."

"They were both just very happy," Faith said. "And that's the best part of the story."

The Museum of Chincoteague Island is creating a Beebe Ranch committee to help develop plans for the property. Those interested in serving on the committee can send a letter or email to the museum stating their interest within the next month, Faith said.

Reach out to the museum at museumofci@gmail.com or by mailing Museum of Chincoteague Island, P.O. Box 352, Chincoteague Island, VA 23336.

Call the museum at 757-336-6117 for more information.
