‘Neighbors’ program helps island’s elderly

BY CLARA VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

A local group is helping older adults stay in their homes by providing help with household tasks, transportation, social connections, and other small services.

Village Neighbors is a volunteer-driven group on Chincoteague Island, where it is a program of the non-profit Island Community House.

In an area where almost 40% of the population is age 65 and older, the organization is helping fill the gap in existing services.

“In the past, neighbors, churches, and family took care of people, but it’s just not as true anymore,” said Lisa Cannon, Village Neighbors ambassador and founder.

“You can’t hire somebody every time you need a lightbulb changed, and that’s the kind of thing Village Neighbors offers – little things that let you stay in

Unique diabetes clinic plans move to Onley

BY TED SHOCKLEY
Eastern Shore Post

A company offering a medical method to counteract insulin resistance in people with diabetes will open a clinic in Onley, part of a chain of three new facilities statewide.

The procedure, called metabolic syndrome insulin infusion, could benefit the Eastern Shore, which has one of the highest rates of diabetes in the state and one of the youngest average ages of adult-onset, or Type 2, diabetes.

“This is really about improving people’s lives,” said Donald Marette, the co-owner of two medical companies, including the insulin infusion company, that are headquartered in Cape Charles, where he lives.

“We believe this is how metabolic function is going to be treated in the future,” said Marette, who co-owns the business with a physician who is a former chairman of the American Podiatric Medical

Accomack's White files for District 9 school board seat

Malcolm "Pep" White, the District 9 representative on the Accomack County School Board, has filed for re-election in the Nov. 7 general election.

"I bring a committed voice for the people of District 9," said White, who was born and raised in Accomack County.

"During my first term, it started as a learning experience to understand the overall responsibility of school board membership."

White said he looks forward to continuing to apply his "knowledge, experience, and voice for the district."

White is a graduate of Arcadia High School and his wife, Sandra, graduated from Nandua High School.

Both of their children are Nandua graduates.

Malcolm White

White said he "has a wealth of familiarity with both schools' needs."

White said he "is committed to assisting Accomack County to provide a rigorous education for our students so that they become productive citizens."

White said giving back to the local community is a priority for him and is one factor in his decision to seek re-election.

"I have a heart for the county, including its parents, students, teachers, all staff, and administrators. Every person connected to our school district is important," said White.

White holds degrees in business administration and information technology from Eastern Shore Community College, where he has been employed for 21 years.

A military veteran, he said, "I served my country, and my goal is to continue serving my community and District 9 by supporting the county's educational goals and objectives. Through my military career, I learned the value of commitment and hard work."

White said his mantra as he seeks re-election is "Aim high," and he said he puts the slogan into practice daily as a family man, employee, and community representative.

White said providing high-quality public service remains a priority for him.

He said he is known for his ability to lead problem solving and respond with working solutions.

"My formal education in business administration and information technology has prepared me to be a well-informed, responsible, and influential candidate for school board's District 9," said White.

Volunteers sought for mentoring program

During the summer of 2022 three local women united by a passion for helping children thrive founded a youth mentor and tutoring program powered by local volunteers.

Susan Burger, Clare Nowakowski, and Ami Butta are experienced professionals in the education and child welfare fields who are using their skills and experiences to pull together community volunteers.

They named the program Shore Mentors, with the mission of enhancing the successful academic and social development of Northampton County children and youth through the encouraging, ongoing support of an adult mentor and tutor relationship.

The Shore Mentors program recruits, screens, trains, and supports volunteers who meet regularly with their assigned students during the school day or in after-school programs.

The program works collaboratively with the school for student referrals and helps ensure the volunteers are used effectively.

Last year Shore Mentors successfully placed 12 volunteers in local schools.

The volunteers are adults who enjoy being with children and share a strong interest in their success.

Some are retired teachers, engineers, psychologists, and dedicated parents and grandparents.

They are recruiting new volunteers looking to make a difference in their community for the 2023-2024 school year.

Their next information session will be held at the Cape Charles Civic Center on Tuesday, Sept. 12, at 1 p.m.

If you would like to attend or participate, please contact co-founder Susan Burger at sfriedbur@gmail.com.

A training session will be held immediately after from 2 to 4 p.m.

PUBLIC NOTICE

Association.

There are 160 similar centers in the United States.

"This isn't new," he said. "It's just new to the area."

The company, called MSII, also will be opening clinics in Newport News and Stafford. It plans to open in Onley this fall.

Diabetes is a chronic condition in which the body resists or cannot produce enough insulin, which allows glucose — a form of sugar — to enter the body's cells and produce energy.

The result is high blood sugar levels, which can damage eyes, nerves, kidneys, and blood vessels.

MSII's technique works on restoring metabolic and kidney function and is approved by the U.S Food and Drug Administration, he said.

The procedure eliminates neuropathy — weakness, numbness, and pain, usually in the hands and feet — by 95%, Marettte said. Diabetes is one of the most common causes of neuropathy.

"It really just makes an enormous difference in people's lives," he said.

Marettte cited statistics that show Accomack County has 3,100 diagnosed cases of diabetes. Northampton County has 1,100 cases.

Marettte said the actual number of Type 2 diabetes cases on the Eastern Shore is likely higher because some people have undiagnosed diabetes.

Causative factors of Type 2 diabetes include obesity, physical inactivity, and family history.

Marettte has had a long career in healthcare solutions and is one of the owners of Maryland-based Noveta Health, where he works as chief marketing officer.

He said plans were to open the Onley facility as early as Dec. 1.

Funding sought for three-story downtown mural

BY CLARA VAUGHN
Eastern Shore Post

Chincoteague’s downtown merchants are raising funds to bring a mural to one of the town’s oldest buildings.

The project by the Historic Main Street Merchants Association aims to add a three-story rendering of Chincoteague’s historic working waterfront to the north side of 4110 Main St.

Artist Michael Rosato, of Maryland’s Eastern Shore, plans to begin work late this summer, after businessowners raise funds for the project.

“A mural is like one frame of a story,” Rosato said. “People engage with stories if it’s a good story. It engages the viewer to find out a little bit more.”

“We’re hoping that this mural will open the door for other blank canvasses to get considered for murals,” said Cindy Faith, a member of Chincoteague’s Main Street Merchants.

The concept of creating a larger-than-life canvas on the 1892 building came about a year ago, after the former Showard Brothers Hardware building was torn down, Faith said.

In recent years, the shop was home to the Purple Pony Shirt Company, but it had fallen into disrepair, she said.

Razing the 90-year-old storefront exposed the side of the neighboring business, a former Masonic building that houses Sunsations.

The three-story building is visible from the causeway, giving travelers their first glimpse of the mural as they approach Chincoteague Island. From there, the painting will open up to a lifelike scene showing watermen working along the backdrop of downtown Chincoteague as it would have appeared a century ago.

Chincoteague is “an incredible community with a long history and a very real and engaging story, and it lends itself wonderfully to storytelling through murals,” Rosato said.

The self-trained artist has been creating murals for over 30 years and specializes in narratives told through realism and large-scale pieces.

He lives in Church Creek, on Maryland’s Eastern Shore, and has created dozens of murals, including a recent rendering of Harriet Tubman at her namesake museum in Cambridge, Md.

Rosato met with the downtown merchants to develop the concept of a painting that tells the history of Chincoteague Island. The scene celebrates diversity with two waterman, including the image of well-known Chincoteague resident Moose Reed, and features local marine life such as flounder, shellfish, and a 8-by-16-foot blue crab.

“As you come in closer to the mural, you start to see the detail of the fish in the water, the crabs buried in the sand,” Rosato said.

“An important part of the mural painting is that viewer experience,” he said. “When a viewer looks at the wall, you want to engage them.”

Business owners provided input on the final design, which is “a celebration of Chincoteague’s history with the seafood industry and the working watermen,” Faith said.

The building is historic, too, surviving two major fires that destroyed most of the downtown area aside from a few brick structures. It served as Chincoteague’s post office for years after the former post office burned down in 1920, Faith said.

"You can look at it two ways: You can look at it as blight, or you can look at it as a blank canvas," she said of the recently exposed wall.

"Murals bring walls to life," said Rosato. "It can transform a building – sometimes it can transform people in front of it."

They agreed the mural will draw visitors downtown, into shops, and even to the Museum of Chincoteague Island to learn more about the history shown in painting.

Work on the mural and repairs to the wall will cost around $36,000,

Faith said, and the merchants are raising funds to complete the project.

Supporters can donate directly to the effort by walking in to Taylor Bank or by dropping off a donation at Sundial Books, both on Main Street, she said. They can also mail a donation to Sundial Books, care of Historic Main Street Merchants, 4065 Main St., Chincoteague, VA 23336.

The Main Street Merchants will host a fundraising event at the end of the summer, which they will announce at a later date, Faith said.

Businesses can sponsor the mural, which is tax deductible, and a GoFundMe page for the project is forthcoming, she said.

SERVING VIRGINIA'S EASTERN SHORE

THE PAPER'S POSITION

Public art becomes an Eastern Shore amenity

Public art is such a meaningful amenity. It brings vibrancy to our bland edifices. It adds perspective and culture to our unique communities. It hones in on our geographical identities, creating images that portray who we were and who we are. It humanizes our buildings, parks, and thoroughfares.

These are compelling days for public art on Virginia's Eastern Shore. Onancock continues an initiative to create murals on blank outdoor walls. Chincoteague has launched an endeavor to create a downtown mural on an historic building. These projects are the essence of local spirit and a gift that gives again and again.

And don't forget the Eastern Shore's unique and large "Love" signs, which represent our communities' individuality. They are photo-worthy place designators and distinctive points of community pride.

The Eastern Shore's public art also includes bronze sculptures like the skiff at the entry of Bay Creek in Cape Charles, the bald eagle in flight at Eastern Shore Community College, and the world-famous pony Misty on Main Street, Chincoteague Island.

There are some pieces of public art on the Eastern Shore that have been around for several years now — like the Miss Ruby Lee mural on Chincoteague and the boating mural on the south side of Four Corner Plaza. They add color and character to our area.

It is fun to read the accounts of — and see the progress on — the Eastern Shore's burgeoning public arts collective. We look forward to seeing the current projects completed. And we can't wait to see what is next.

Oyster's own Johnny Crumb, a legendary game warden

BY RICHARD M. PERRY

Guest columnist

I knew Johnny Crumb when I was a Virginia Game Warden but never worked with him. I would see him occasionally at an annual in-service or at training.

To me, Johnny always seemed intense and serious. Everyone always had good things to say about Johnny and I knew he was instrumental in breaking up the rampant duck trapping in Northampton and Accomack counties.

He retired in 1991. On Dec. 11, 2022, Sgt. Rich Landers and I met with Johnny in Oyster, at Crumb Hill.

Johnny loved the outdoors, and as a boy he was impressed with the need for the conservation of wildlife. He was in the Boy Scouts growing up and earned the coveted Eagle Scout Award.

The big business in the area he grew up in was the seafood industry: crabs, oysters, clams, and fish. Johnny told us that quite a few people became rich from the harvest of this resource.

Once he became old enough, Johnny told us that he took every opportunity he could to ride with his stepfather in his patrol boat or in his car when he was doing game warden work.

Upon graduating high school, Johnny was drafted into the U.S. Army, and this was in 1950 at the start of the Korean War.

His basic training was in Kentucky and then he went to Texas. He said he was very good with automatic weapons and his specialty was the quad .50 caliber machine gun.

Following his time in the Army, Johnny moved back to Oyster and went to work for his scoutmaster. When he turned 21, he became a Mason and later became a Master Mason.

He also married the former Charlesie Barns of Blacksburg, who became a school teacher. They have three children — a son and two daughters.

Johnny's stepdad, Captain Ed Joseph Doughty, the game warden for Northampton County, suffered a heart attack while working on March 25, 1957, and died at the age of 62.

Johnny told us that he never applied to be a game warden. He said the local officials came to him and asked him to become game warden, so that was when he started.

Johnny said that he was happy doing what he was doing and was making good money but when offered the job of game warden, he couldn't resist.

In the beginning he had to work under his stepdad's helper, Rufus "Sweetheart" Charnock, a special game warden.

Job frustrations

Johnny described some of his frustrations in trying to do his job.

"I realized that I had no team over here to work with," he said. He told us that no one was really doing any enforcement work.

Johnny told us he was young, aggressive to protect the resource by enforcing the laws, and committed to doing it.

One of his other main frustrations was the low fines handed down by the courts, which did nothing to stop the wholesale slaughter.

Johnny told us that when he would go up to Chincoteague to patrol with other wardens that "we didn't go up there to catch a duck trapper; we went up there to just tear the traps up." He said that didn't solve anything. The trapper would just immediately put another trap at the spot and the ducks would come right back since they had been feeding on corn there.

Instead of just destroying the duck traps, Johnny knew that tactics had to change. He had to catch the trappers in the act, and he made that his mission throughout the 1960s.

In addition to this, Johnny had earlier stated that one of his frustrations was the low fines levied in court for wildlife violations. He kept detailed records of the number of duck traps he located and the numbers of wild ducks trapped.

He took his records to show politicians how bad the problem really was. The legislature enacted a stiff new law where the minimum fine for duck trapping would be $500.

Johnny told us that catching duck trappers red handed was quite difficult. The trappers were extremely cagey and wary and would notice anything out of the ordinary — a drag mark where a boat was pulled up in a marsh, the scrape of boat paint on oysters, footprints, etc.

Trappers usually did their work in the night and knew the marshes like the back of their hands. He said that other wardens messed him up more times than he could count, so he depended on someone he could totally trust — his wife, his brother, and his stepbrother.

Johnny told of one time his wife dropped him off in the marsh after church on Sunday. He wasn't sure if he would need to spend the night, so his brother and stepbrother were to drive by in the middle of the night, and if they saw his handkerchief hanging on a bush next to the road, they were to pull over and he would get in the car. If there was no handkerchief, he was going to spend the night in the marsh.

Another time, his wife dropped him and Grayson Chesser Sr. off in the marsh on a Tuesday afternoon. (Of note: Johnny said that Grayson Chesser Sr., a special game warden, was the best and would do whatever it took to get the job done. Johnny said that Grayson would say, "Ding, ding." Johnny asked him what did that mean? Grayson replied, "I just made another hour." He was paid $2.50 per hour.)

Johnny stated that he and Grayson stayed in the marsh from Tuesday afternoon until Friday morning when they finally caught the duck trapper.

The trapper came in that morning to bait his trap with corn. When they apprehended the trapper at his house that morning, they found additional duck traps and corn under his front porch. Johnny said all he had during that time from Tuesday afternoon to Friday morning was a Hershey bar and some water.

This is the method that Johnny employed throughout the 1960s to put a stop to duck trapping on the Eastern Shore. Johnny was also instrumental in having the fines increased for trapping ducks and attempting to trap ducks thanks to his thorough documentation.

Ending duck trapping

We also interviewed Grayson Chesser Jr. whose father, Grayson Sr., a special game warden, worked a lot with Johnny.

Grayson Jr., a graduate of Old Dominion University, farmer, decoy carver, artist, waterfowl guide, and a special game warden, told us that the increase in fines, with a minimum of $500 to be paid by the trapper once caught by Johnny, basically ended duck trapping on the Shore. The price was too high to pay.

Johnny told us another story that emphasized how detrimental duck traps were to the resource. After church one Sunday, a man approached Johnny and told him that he wanted to tell him something and he couldn't hold it in any longer.

This was at the end of duck trapping and the man wanted to tell him about his father, a prominent citizen on the Shore who was very good at duck trapping. His father was never caught. His father had a huge trap in the marsh, large enough to hold a pickup truck and it was baited with corn. He wanted to see how many ducks he could catch in a night and he exceeded his expectations. He caught over 500 ducks in the trap. Johnny advised us that was the worst case of duck trapping that he knew took place on the Shore.

In the October 1971 issue of Virginia Wildlife was an article entitled "Know Your Wardens," written by F. N. Satterlee. "John W. Crumb's middle name is Wilson. However, to untold numbers of sportsmen, it should be: 'Dedication,'" Satterlee wrote.

These sportsmen from the U. S., Canada, and Mexico felt so strongly about this "dedication" that, as a direct result, John was singularly honored at the October 1968 meeting of the Southeastern Association of Game and Fish Commissioners. At that time he was presented the coveted C. W. Watson Conservation Award for his successful efforts in halting an illegal duck trapping operation on the Eastern Shore.

Upwards of 100,000 waterfowl had been unlawfully harvested during the eight years that John worked to finally bring the criminals to justice, according to the article. (When shown the article, Johnny said that it was more like 100,000 a year.)

Towards the end of the interview I told Johnny that he has had a remarkable career as a game warden. His career spanned 34 years, from 1957 until he retired in 1991, and I bet he has seen more beautiful sunrises and sunsets than almost anyone on the Eastern Shore.

I asked Johnny if he could tell us a highlight of his career. Without hesitation Johnny replied, "The highlight of my career was knowing that I managed to safely keep my reputation and that I was the same guy when I retired that I was when I was hired. I made very few enemies and got great support from the people that I had given tickets to, and the people that I had caught trapping ducks and so forth, they were friends to me."

The writer is special assistant to the executive director for law enforcement at the Virginia Department of Wildlife Resources.

Damon Matthews

Mr. Damon Derrick Matthews, 62, husband of Cynthia Ellen Button-Matthews and a resident of Cashville, passed away Tuesday, July 4, 2023, at Sentara Norfolk General Hospital.

Born in Norfolk on May 15, 1961, he was the son of Penny Hawkins Matthews, of Cashville, and the late John David "Butch" Matthews Jr.

Following high school, Damon attended Virginia Tech before he became owner-operator of Virginia Beach Irrigation, successfully running his business for over 40 years.

Damon grew up on the Eastern Shore, spending as much time as he could fishing, hunting, and crabbing with his lifelong friend, Jeffrey S. Diggs, and exploring the rich history of the area that he so loved. In 2013 he finally realized his lifelong dream of moving back to the Shore and relocated his family to Onancock, where they have lived since.

A faithful servant of the Lord, Damon was a devoted member and deacon at Broadway Baptist Church. He cared deeply for his church family and community and was always first to make sure the ill and elderly were taken care of during their time of need.

Along with his wife of 24 years, Damon leaves to cherish his memory his children, Amber Matthews (Alex), of Chesapeake, Kristin Riddick (Coley), of Virginia Beach, and Emily Faith Matthews, of Cashville; brother, David E. "Butch" Matthews (Debbie), of Virginia Beach; daughter-in-law, Carolyn Waue of Ohio; grandchildren, William Matthews, Natalie and Nathan Waue, and Charlotte and Ella Riddick. He is survived and deeply missed by his mother, Penny Hawkins Matthews. He is also survived by his dedicated VBI crew, Bucky, Chris, Rico, and Joe, all of whom he thought of like family.

Damon was predeceased by his father, John David "Butch" Matthews, and his son, David Waue.

Services are scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 19, 2023, at 11 a.m., at Broadway Baptist Church, Onancock.

Aug. 11 proclaimed "Fred Walker Day" in Exmore

BY STEFANIE JACKSON

An Exmore man was recognized on Monday, Aug., 7, for his volunteer work to keep the children in his community safe.

Fred Lawrence Walker, who lives on Benjamin Banneker Street in the New Road community, received a framed copy of a proclamation by Mayor Douglas Greer declaring Friday, Aug. 11, "Fred Walker Day" in Exmore.

Walker had noticed a corner lot in

New Road was full of overgrowth that was obstructing the view of drivers. Concerned for the safety of the many children who play outside in the community, Walker took it upon himself to clear the entire lot by hand.

"He saw children almost get hit by a car," said Town Manager Robert Duer. "He went out there ... and cleaned that lot up by hand at 70 years old."

The town manager thanked Walker for being a "good citizen."

Ride a wave Saturday at the town beach

Part of Cape Charles' serene public beach will have wave action suitable for surfing on Saturday, Aug. 12.

The K-Coast Surf Shop annual Day on the Bay will be held beginning at noon when a commercial workboat churns up some waves for surfing, paddle boarding, or bodyboarding. It will run to 4 p.m.

The section of the beach with the waves will be between Mason Avenue and Randolph Avenue — the southern section of the beach, between the gazebo and the town's "Love" sign.

The event is free. Participants can bring their own surfboards or bodyboards, or borrow one from the assortment provided by K-Coast.

There is no charge to participate.

"All you have to do is come, sign up, grab a board, and ride," said Spencer Travis, operator of K-Coast.

Travis, who grew up in Cape Charles, said he always lamented as a child that there weren't waves suitable for surfing at the town beach. He said the event provides a rare chance to surf in the town.

Afterward, during the 7 p.m. concert at Cape Charles' Central Park, there will be a large projector next to the band and footage from the Day on the Bay will be shown to the crowd.

Also during the concert there will be a surfboard giveaway and other giveaways.

Registration begins at 11 a.m.

NASA announces the availability of the Wallops Island Northern Development Project Final Environmental Assessment (EA) and Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI) for the development of new infrastructure and operations on the north end of Wallops Island at NASA Goddard Space Flight Center's Wallops Flight Facility (WFF), Accomack County, Virginia.

The Final EA evaluates the environmental consequences of a range of reasonable alternatives that meet the needs of NASA and other state and federal Cooperating Agencies by growing the U.S. focus on commercial space; increasing partnerships with Department of Defense agencies; continuing their role in academia, civil space science, exploration, and discovery; safely and securely increasing operation frequency on Wallops Island; and improving inadequate infrastructure.

The Proposed Action would support development of a new fixed pier and turning basin, including channel dredging. The project would also include construction of a pier access road, a second hangar, and a new vehicle parking lot. New facilities and improvements to the existing access road, airstrip, and utilities would likewise be constructed or installed.

NASA considered and addressed comments received on the Draft EA and included recommendations received from government agencies during environmental reviews. NASA has selected the Proposed Action as the Preferred Alternative, and has documented in the FONSI that the Proposed Action would not individually or cumulatively result in significant impacts to the quality of the human environment.

The Final EA and FONSI are available for public review at the following locations:

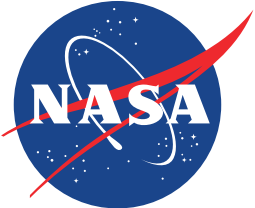

- Chincoteague Island Library, Chincoteague, VA
- Eastern Shore Public Library, Accomack, VA
- Northampton Free Library, Nassawadox, VA

The Final EA is also available on the internet in Adobe portable document format (pdf) at:

Summertime fishing has improved

Fishing has improved over the last week, but it is still not as hot

Bill

as the weather! Summertime species such as Spanish mackerel, cobia, sheepshead, and spadefish remain active throughout most of the tide cycles. Other species are actively feeding during periods of cooler water with the incoming tide and during low light periods such as sunrise and sunset. The offshore bite has improved just in time for the Ocean City, Md.-based White Marlin Open.

Upper Shore

Captain Matt Abell, at the Sea Hawk Sports Center, said that the seaside's inshore wrecks and reefs are still providing some of the most consistent action, as anglers are finding a mixed bag of flounder, gray triggerfish, Atlantic spadefish, and Spanish mackerel. The best action has been occurring around submerged structures in depths of 20 to 70 feet.

Anglers targeting flounder are jigging with bucktails adorned with Berkley Gulp, squid strips, or fresh cut bait strips. The spades and triggers have been hitting small pieces of clam suspended just above the structures. Inside the inlet, flounder can still be caught when clean, cooler water can be found, usually around the high tide mark.

On the Chesapeake Bay side of the peninsula, red drum and speckled trout catches have come from some of the shallows, while sheepshead and cobia have been more structurally oriented. Schools of Spanish mackerel have been encountered in the middle bay and have been chasing trolled small Clark Spoons and Stingsilvers.

Wachapreague

Captain Lindsay Paul, aboard the charter vessel Almost Persuaded, reported that the flounder bite out of Wachapreague continues to be productive during the flood tide. Persistent anglers are catching their limits of the flatfish using Berkley Gulp combined with live minnows or frozen silversides fished on high-low rigs.

Croaker and kingfish (whiting) have shown up in the inshore mix and can be tempted with small pieces of bloodworm or bloodworm-flavored artificial baits.

The inshore to mid-offshore wrecks are holding flounder and black sea bass. Captain Paul said that the offshore blue water fishery has improved with reported catches of yellowfin tuna, mahi, and an occasional bigeye tuna.

Lower Shore

Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle, commented that the Spanish mackerel fishery has been "really good" off Cape Charles and south to the ships. Schools of "macks" with some small bluefish mixed in have been found chasing baitfish, marked by feeding birds.

Cobia fishing was described as slow, with lots of fish seen but few interested in taking baits. Flounder fishing was reported as remaining "solid," both inshore and on the ocean wrecks. Cut bait and Gulp combos have been the baits of choice.

Spadefish catches are still coming from the third island of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge Tunnel and the Cell. Speckled trout and small puppy drum have been taken inside some of the lower bayside creeks. Anglers fishing the lower bayside piers have been finding mostly small spot and gray trout.

Dan Bell, at Ocean's East-Eastern Shore, reported that bottom fishing for cobia has slowed, but plenty of fish can be sighted on the surface. The fish have started to become more structurally-oriented and can be seen hanging around the pilings of the bridge-tunnel.

The sheephead bite around the bridge-tunnel has been consistent, but the average size of the fish has been on the smaller side with fewer trophy-sized fish boated recently.

Flounder fishing remains steady in the deeper ocean waters as well as the high-rise section of the bridge-tunnel complex. Spanish mackerel and bluefish catches have come from along the bridge-tunnel, while the waters off Kiptopeke are producing croaker, spot, and sand mullet (whiting).

17th Annual Bayside Poker Run successful in choppy seas

The 2023 Bayside Poker Run held on Saturday, July 29 was a great success on a boating day featuring gusty winds and choppy seas. The event involved small boats cruising the Chesapeake Bay in a navigational competition that included Onancock, Pungoteague, and Nandua creeks. This 17th annual event was sponsored jointly by the Onancock Rotary Club and the Pungoteague Ruritan Club.

Following the Blessing of the Fleet and a captains' meeting, boaters spent a day on the bay locating six checkpoints and two mystery locations. Boaters gathered to attend the awards celebration at the Eastern Shore Yacht and Country Club on Pungoteague Creek at the end the day's adventures.

This year's small boat competition once again included the 'Chesapeake Challenge' in the navigational component of the event. This challenge required the crew of each boat to compete in a physical or nautical activity at each checkpoint.

When the final points were tabulated, the Harbour Towne, captained by Matthew Freeze, topped the leaderboard with 192 points and claimed the $500 prize.

Following closely with 179 points was the crew of Why Knot II, captained by Brian Pruitt. Tyler Hinman, of the That's What She Said, captained by J.D. Outten, had the best poker hand and won a weekend trip.

The Eastern Shore Award was a special recognition of BW James, who was the only captain to receive a perfect score in the 'Crab Pot Pulling' competition.

Neighbors

your house,” said David Landsberger, the group’s foundational donor.

Village Neighbors began as a concept in 2021, when founders sent out an island-wide survey to gauge the needs of residents age 60 years and older and residents’ willingness to volunteer for the program, he said.

Responses were “overwhelmingly positive,” Cannon said.

The Island Community House took on the task of organizing a Chincoteague Village, using models from other groups in the national Village to Village Network — a movement that began in Boston in 2002 and has spread to more than 300 Villages across the country.

“If you’ve seen one Village, you’ve seen one Village, because they’re all different,” said Landsberger, who organized the software Village Neighbors uses to match volunteers with clients based on services requested and times they are needed.

The top requests are transportation to doctor’s appointments, grocery shopping, and other trips. Village Neighbors has 11 drivers who provide rides of up to 120 miles roundtrip, Cannon said, allowing residents to attend doctor’s appointments in Salisbury.

Close behind are requests for friendly home visits — “just someone to come and chat for an hour, play cards, help order online groceries, help organize closets, or tidy the bedroom,” she said.

The group also provides phone buddy calls to residents to check in and offer assistance with services they might need.

“A lot of our members have family that live off-island, sometimes three hours away, sometimes four hours away,” said Andrea Canfield, Village Neighbors’ business development volunteer.

“They feel safe with vetted volunteers looking out after a family member,” she said.

When Village Neighbors launched in May 2022, the program had 12 volunteers. A year later, the group has 45 multi-generational volunteers who provide services based on their own skills.

Typical volunteer services last one to two hours and helpers can devote as much or as little time as they want to the program, Cannon said. Volunteers undergo background checks and a two-hour orientation, as well as have a handbook to follow, she said.

The Chincoteague Village has 20 island residents who use the services. Moving into its second year, the group aims to increase its membership, Canfield said.

“When Village Neighbors was started, we determined we were going ... to leverage Village Neighbors for the most vulnerable. Now, we want to build that out to the most recent retirees – people who feel passionate about controlling their lives,” she said.

That includes expanding programs to include more social activities and more do-it-yourself trainings, she said.

There is also potential for Villages to grow in other Eastern Shore towns, leveraging the software Village Neighbors established to match volunteers with service requests, Landsberger said.

“This is something that we could help another area with,” he said. “I’ve had people from Onancock and Cape Charles ... and other areas say, ‘This is something we’d like to do.’”

Chincoteague Island residents age 60 and older can join Village Neighbors for $20 per month — a $240 annual membership — which allows them to request 10 monthly services per household. The group also offers shorter-term memberships of three or six consecutive months for seasonal residents or those who need help for a short time, such as during recovery from a surgery.

Membership fees help to cover the cost of running the program, but no one is turned away if they are unable to pay, Cannon said.

In addition to membership fees, the group has successfully applied for several grants and seeks sponsorships to cover its costs such as liability insurance, phone lines, computers, software, and a part-time coordinator.

“What has really struck me is how many people ... want to do this type of volunteering,” Cannon said. “It’s very heartwarming.”

“Everybody says, ‘It take a Village,’ and that’s what we’re hoping to provide,” Landsberger said.

Sewer upgrade has begun but questions remain

BY STEFANIE JACKSON
Eastern Shore Post

Exmore’s sewer project is officially underway, beginning with a ground-breaking on Seaside Road on the morning of Tuesday, Aug. 8.

The Kevcor Corporation, of Norfolk, is constructing the new collection system that will serve the entire town of Exmore, enabling the development of additional homes and businesses.

Kevcor participated in a competitive bidding process and was chosen over four other contractors.

Exmore has partnered with the Hampton Roads Sanitation District in an effort to keep project costs and future sewer bills to a minimum.

The new collection system will connect to the force main that HRSD is constructing along U.S. Route 13. The force main will transport Exmore’s wastewater to Onancock’s treatment plant, which has excess capacity.

Exmore began planning its sewer project more than four years ago. At the time, the project was expected to cost around $9 million.

But in the middle of the planning phase, the COVID-19 pandemic occurred, which sharply drove up the cost of materials, equipment, and labor.

The current estimated cost of the sewer project is $18.4 million. However, Kevcor has been working with Exmore to implement cost-saving measures that could shave around $1 million off the price of construction.

The sewer project’s anticipated completion date is Jan. 1, 2025.

Homes will be connected to the new sewer system first, followed by businesses.

Public input

Throughout the entire planning phase of the sewer project, Exmore has welcomed public input and continues to address residents’ concerns.

At the town council meeting on Aug. 7, Exmore resident Jake Charnock, a professional sewer and septic system installer, discussed his concerns about the project with town officials.

Exmore had sent every homeowner and business owner in town an easement that will allow town employees to access private property to perform sewer system maintenance and repairs.

The sewer project’s state and federal funding sources are requiring every easement to be signed and filed at the Northampton County courthouse before Exmore can receive the approved funds.

Charnock was concerned because his easement would cover a large area and come within five feet of his home.

He wanted to know why his grinder pump — which will process sewage into a slurry before it enters the collection system — would be installed in the middle of the easement area instead of in the public road right-of-way.

Exmore Director of Utilities Taylor Dukes said that the grinder pumps will be installed where homeowners’ septic tanks are currently located “to make this the most economical project for the citizens.”

Each septic tank lid will be removed, and each tank will be filled with soil. Septic tanks above ground likely will be demolished, Dukes said.

He noted that Charnock’s grinder pump could be moved about 10 or 15 feet, but it could not be in the right-of-way.

Charnock also asked why Exmore decided to install a low-pressure system instead of a gravity system.

Dukes said that decision was made also “to save on expense, so that you don’t have a $100 a month base sewer bill. We’ve done everything we can to cut costs to get you a $40 a month base bill.”

The engineering studies that were required by state and federal agencies also recommended a low-pressure system.

Charnock disagreed with some of the decisions Exmore officials made about the sewer system.

“I do this for a living. I’m very familiar with this, and this is not a typical system,” Charnock said.

However, on the matter of the grinder pump’s location, he agreed to allow Dukes to visit his home so they could look at the property and reach a compromise.

Despite objections, county selling Eastville Inn

BY STEFANIE JACKSON
Eastern Shore Post

Northampton County is selling the historic Eastville Inn for $250,000 to a Virginia Beach attorney who plans to convert the building into a restaurant and a bed-and-breakfast.

"I will do my best to actually bring this building back into its glory days and to give it purpose again," said attorney John Greenside at the Aug. 8 Northampton supervisors meeting.

The Eastville Inn was built around 1724 to serve people coming to the county seat to do business at the courthouse.

Business at the inn was dwindling in the 1960s, around the same time the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel was built and traffic became more likely to stay on the highway than pass through town.

'It's been a shame because it hasn't been a community asset for a long time.'

Price Clarke
speaking about the Eastville Inn

Since then, several restaurants have had short runs at the Eastville Inn. Most recently, Louise Oliver ran a catering business out of the commercial kitchen on the inn's first floor.

Northampton supervisors had approved a new lease for Oliver in April 2022, with a condition that restaurant-style meal service be provided at the inn at least three days a week, five hours a day. That condition was not met, county officials said.

In October 2022, supervisors sent Oliver a letter stating that because she did not sign and return the lease or abide by the terms of the lease, her tenancy would be terminated effective Feb. 28, 2023.

In February, Northampton advertised a request for proposals for the sale of the Eastville Inn. The county chose to negotiate with Greenside, who was one of four parties who responded to the ad.

After the sale of the Eastville Inn has closed, the restaurant that is planned for the first floor is expected to open within six months. The restaurant will serve breakfast, lunch, and dinner, according to demand, Greenside said.

The restaurant will deliver locally to residents and county administration buildings.

The bed-and-breakfast will occupy the second floor and is anticipated to have eight rooms, each with its own kitchenette.

The second floor is currently empty and completely stripped down to empty wall frames and bare wood floors.

Because the second floor needs such heavy renovation, the bed-and-breakfast likely won't open until a year after the Eastville Inn's sale closes, Greenside said.

During the public hearing on the matter, two Northampton residents spoke in opposition to the sale of the Eastville Inn.

Jonny Stevenson, who is Eastville's town clerk but spoke as a citizen, reminded supervisors of the "very important" history of Northampton County.

"We have the oldest continuous court records in the nation, which is a national treasure. ... I consider the Eastville Inn also a treasure," she said.

Stevenson remembered local relics that were lost to history, including the former county jail, the Confederate soldier monument, the former high school, and the Capeville train station.

Many of these were lost because no one preserved them and Northampton County couldn't afford to restore them.

Stevenson was concerned that if the Eastville Inn was sold, it could suffer a similar fate.

Price Clarke, of Eastville, agreed with Stevenson. Clarke favored leasing the Eastville Inn and keeping it under Northampton County's supervision.

"It's more than about the money," Clarke said. "To me, it's about building community, and it's been a shame because it hasn't been a community asset for a long time."

Supervisor Betsy Mapp pointed out that the county has leased the Eastville Inn several times and "failed over and over again."

County Attorney Michelle Clayton noted that the Eastville Inn's sales agreement and deed will have protections built in that will allow Northampton to maintain some control over the building and how it's used.

Northampton will have the right of first refusal, meaning that if Greenside ever decides to sell the Eastville Inn, he must offer it to the county first.

If the restaurant isn't open within 18 months, Greenside must sell the inn back to the county with a "reduction for the cost of his opportunity," Clayton said.

The Eastville Inn will be required to be a restaurant for 20 years, and its historic exterior appearance must be maintained. The owner will have "creative license" over the interior design, she said.

"I do think there are some protections there for the county to not lose this ... treasure that we have in the Eastville Inn," Clayton said.

Northampton supervisors approved the sale of the Eastville Inn in a unanimous vote. Chairman John Coker was absent.

Happy Birthday to our angel!
They say God sends angels down from heaven above to watch over us throughout this life.

When you left us, we weren't prepared, but even then we knew that you would always be with us.
God has gained a beautiful soul.
As your birthday approaches this year, we know that even though you are not here with us physically to celebrate your 76th birthday,
you will always live in our hearts.
Happy Birthday, our beautiful angel, until we meet again!
