Cape Charles Rosenwald School sets opening timeline

BY STEFANIE BOWMANN

Eastern Shore Post

The historic Cape Charles Rosenwald school, formerly Cape Charles Elementary School, is undergoing restoration and expected to reopen as a community center in roughly six months to one year.

"We have the opportunity to impact ... the children. Not only the children, but also the community," said Adrian Gardner, the community engagement leader on the newly formed advisory council to the board of the Cape Charles Rosenwald School Restoration Initiative, a nonprofit.

The historic brick building on Old Cape Charles Road, just beyond the former railroad overpass commonly called "the hump," is named after the late Julius Rosenwald, former president of Sears Roebuck.

EXMORE

Residents hear more on battery facility

BY STEFANIE BOWMANN

Eastern Shore Post

An Arizona-based developer and a global battery supplier held an informational meeting in Exmore on Monday, Nov. 18, to address concerns about a 10-megawatt battery energy storage system that they plan to build in town.

Battery company Great Power is partnering with developer Patterson Enterprises to establish an energy storage facility in Exmore with enough capacity to power 600 homes for 40 hours straight, said Harold Patterson, chief executive officer of Patterson Enterprises.

They also want to build the storage facilities all over the Eastern Shore.

The Eastern Shore's power is supplied by an electrical grid that serves 13 states and is operated by PJM Interconnection.

PJM recently participated in an annual power market auction and secured more than 135,000 megawatts of electricity for the grid for the period beginning June 1, 2025, and ending May 31, 2026.

However, due to increased demand for electricity and dwindling supply, prices this year were about 10 times higher than last year.

Electric company customers on the Shore can expect "inevitable" rate hikes next year — unless capacity supply can be increased, according to Monday night's report.

That's where Great Power and Patterson Enterprises want to step in.

They have proposed a battery energy storage system in Exmore near A&N Electric Cooperative's substation. The system will have a footprint of one-quarter acre.

Through a process called "energy arbitrage," electricity would be purchased and stored in batteries when supply is abundant and inexpensive, to be sold and resupplied to the grid during peak demand.

This would result in lower electricity costs for consumers, Patterson said.

But the scope of the project extends beyond the town of Exmore. Great Power and Patterson Enterprises want to cover the entire Eastern Shore with battery energy storage systems at all of ANEC's substations.

To date, they have begun the process in Tasley and Oak Hall in addition to Exmore.

There are at least three other Eastern Shore substations where battery energy storage systems will be proposed in the future, Patterson said.

He said his company has been working with Accomack County and he expects to have a permit for the Tasley battery energy storage system in about one month.

The proposed battery energy storage system in Oak Hall is still in discussion, but Patterson believes the project will be successful, he said.

Patterson and his business associates, including Evan Bierman, president of Great Power, were on hand Monday night to address citizens' concerns, such as the possibility of a battery fire or explosion.

Bierman noted that Great Power produces all LiFePO4 or lithium iron phosphate batteries.

Great Power batteries do not contain rare-earth metals or toxic or chemically reactive elements, he said.

Great Power has produced 800,000 battery sets around the world, providing a combined 25 gigawatt hours of power, and none of the batteries has ever caught fire, Bierman said.

The battery energy storage systems also would be surrounded by acoustic fencing that can reduce sound by 85%, Patterson said.

The town of Exmore would benefit financially from the battery energy storage system, including a one-time siting fee of $200,000.

As allowed by Virginia Code, the town also may adopt an ordinance to receive a revenue share from the battery energy storage system — $1,400 per megawatt, a total of $14,000 annually.

The project also would generate tax revenue for Exmore, including real estate and business license taxes.

The informal meeting held Monday night was for informational purposes for residents. The Exmore Town Council has not yet approved the project.

Parksley man pleads guilty to rape, abduction, strangulation, and escape

BY NANCY DRURY DUNCAN

Eastern Shore Post

A 40-year-old Parksley man pleaded guilty to abduction, strangulation, rape, and attempting to escape from iail.

Lance Carl Jester entered into a plea agreement with the commonwealth that limited his time in prison to 13 years.

In November 2021, Jester called the victim, a woman with whom he had an earlier two-year relationship. He asked her to come to his house to discuss a painting job, which she did.

He suddenly assaulted her, strangled her until she passed out, and raped her.

The prosecution presented the court with photographic evidence of her injuries.

When he came out of his frenzy, the woman tried to reason with him in hope of getting away, said Commonwealth's Attorney Spencer Morgan.

He said Jester suggested they go to his current girlfriend's house "to end her." He told the woman to follow him there in her car.

The woman did not follow him and instead contacted police.

She was taken for a sexual assault exam. DNA evidence connected Jester to the crimes.

Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Michael Baker prosecuted the attempted escape from jail charge against Jester.

In April 2022, while Jester was incarcerated in the Accomack County jail, he was outside in the recreation yard when he was seen looking at the fence and then backing away from it. He ran toward it and began scaling the fence

"He was severely cut by the razor wire," said Baker.

He said the entire incident was seen by a deputy.

Jester's sentencing is set for Dec. 12.

Bank of Cheer prepares for holiday season

With Thanksgiving approaching, thoughts turn to celebrating the holidays and also to helping those less fortunate.

For the past 65 years the Bank of Cheer has helped to make Christmas a little brighter for those less fortunate with the delivery of food to local needy families.

With donations from the community, organizers of Bank of Cheer purchase food that will be packed and delivered by volunteers, many of whom have helped for a decade or more.

Laura Trala has directed the Bank of Cheer for more than 25 years and organizes the purchase and packing of the food and the delivery, which takes place shortly before Christmas.

Volunteers with the help of the Accomack County Parks and Recreation Department pack 150 boxes of food prior to the delivery day.

Traditionally, the Christmas boxes include a turkey or ham, canned meats, fruit, vegetables, flour, and other staples.

It has become a Christmas tradition for local residents, community organizations, churches, and other groups to make a donation to Bank of Cheer. Donors can rest easy knowing that 100% of their donations go to help the Bank of Cheer recipients.

All labor and transportation expenses are donated. Dublin Farms has provided the boxes used for packing the food for many years now. The Exmore Moose Lodge provides a base for packing the food and delivery.

Recipients are selected by community leaders, who confer with ministers, organizations, and employees of Social Services departments to determine the families who most need help.

Monetary donations can be mailed to: Bank of Cheer, c/o Laura Trala, P.O. Box 646, Onley, VA 23418.

SUBMITTED PHOTO

The Eastern Shore of Virginia Habitat for Humanity has started a new fundraiser aimed at providing a way for children to get into the swing of supporting Habitat by signing a doorway header that will then be installed into the current house under construction. This is part of Habitat's year-end campaign of Homes for the Holiday. Due to Habitat policy and insurance restrictions, children under the age of 18 are not allowed on active Habitat build sites. But the demand for kids to participate is high. Board member Linda Pappas initiated this campaign, which will introduce kids to what Habitat does and provide a tangible way for them to participate. A donation will be requested for each signature. Look for the Heads Up for Habitat display at Festive Fridays in Cape Charles and other pop-up locations.

Rosenwald partnered with Booker T. Washington during the Jim Crow era to build more than 5,000 schools for Black students.

Cape Charles Elementary School served students from 1929 until 1966, when it closed during integration.

The building later was used as an eel-packing plant that closed in 1977.

The Cape Charles Rosenwald School Restoration Initiative, founded by Tevya Griffin, became a nonprofit in 2014 with the goal of restoring the school to serve the community once again.

The nonprofit raised funds and purchased the former Cape Charles Elementary in 2019 for $275,000.

To date, the nonprofit has raised more than $2.5 million for the purchase and rehabilitation of the school.

Its current fundraising goal is an additional $1.2 million to reach the total project cost of $3.7 million.

"It seems like a lot ... but we've done it before," Griffin said on Saturday, Nov. 16.

It was the first time the board of the Cape Charles Rosenwald School Restoration Initiative met with its new advisory council. The meeting followed a tour of the school highlighting its ongoing improvements.

The rehabilitated school will feature an auditorium accommodating up to 120 guests, a combination historical exhibit and classroom space that can be divided by an operable wall, a commercial kitchen, a conference room, an office, a storage room, and two restrooms.

The total capacity of the building will be 250.

The Cape Charles Rosenwald School Restoration Initiative advisory board is prepared to do community outreach and engagement to determine the community's needs and build on the goals that the nonprofit previously established for the former elementary school.

Those include a partnership with Eastern Shore Community College, which will offer in-person and remote instruction at the school based on the needs of the community.

The community includes not just Cape Charles or Northampton County but the entire Eastern Shore of Virginia, Griffin noted.

The overarching goal of the school and community center is to break down barriers to educational opportunities and end the cycle of generational poverty.

Hazel Thomas, a member of the advisory council, recommended that the nonprofit preserve its current relationships with schools like ESCC and the College of William & Mary and also involve other colleges and universities.

Not many youth on the Eastern Shore have a "collegiate mindset" because they have had little exposure to opportunities for secondary education, she said.

Gardner would like to see the community center provide not only education and workforce training but also job placement.

"Work is changing. The community is changing. We can be a part of that," he said.

Advisory council members additionally suggested offering financial literacy courses for both youth and adults.

Dianne Davis, board liaison, also noted the need for programming and offerings that will make area youth feel welcome.

The community center is expected to receive its certificate of occupancy in June 2025, said board member Beth Walker, who is also the nonprofit's assistant secretary and project manager.

She looks forward to the development of a "solid plan" for the facility, which is expected to be fully open to the public by January 2026, she said.

Zakia Bright Launches to Success from ESCC Beginnings

Born and raised on the Eastern Shore, Zakia Bright encountered Eastern Shore Community College through a success coach while still in high school. She remembers, "I met with her weekly to discuss my plans after high school. I was able to complete the aptitude test to measure my skills, abilities, and potential to succeed. During that time, I also decided that I wanted to attend ESCC after graduation".

"My journey at ESCC started in January 2009, after receiving my GED in September 2008. I met a lot of great people and had amazing instructors." Zakia continued, "During my time at ESCC, I was a member of Phi Beta Lambda and also was part of a theater group led by Mrs. Wanda Smith." She has great memories of volunteering as an usher at the Wells Theatre in Norfolk with the group. Like many former ESCC students, Zakia valued the interaction and opportunities that gave her confidence and a focus on taking the next steps.

In May 2012, Zakia graduated from ESCC with an Associate of Arts and Science in Business Administration. "I decided to continue my educational journey and started my journey at Old Dominion University in January 2013. During that time, I was a Library Technician for the Navy." She graduated from ODU in May of 2016 with a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration, with a concentration in Marketing.

Zakia knew that she wanted more, and after receiving her bachelor's degree, she decided to her educational path would lead her to Walden University. "In August of 2018 I added to my resume with a Master of Science in Marketing degree from Walden". Having obtained her two latest degrees while working as a Navy Contractor, Zakia was setting her sights career-wise on becoming a federal employee.

Patience and persistence prevailed in June 2022 when her journey at NASA Wallops began. Zakia was hired as a Contract Specialist. "I could proudly look back on the path I embarked on that began at Eastern Shore Community College." she noted. Zakia is surrounded by many colleagues at NASA who shared that path and is watching a growing number of new students take advantage of the talent pipeline that feeds directly from the campus of ESCC.

In addition to her role at NASA, Zakia received her Christian Life and Leadership Coach certification from the Purpose Zeal Academy in the summer of 2024 and became a children's book author with titles available on Amazon. She resides in New Church, Virginia, with her son Quincy. In October, Zakia shared her ESCC story with attendees at the college's annual Alumni Homecoming Event.

THE PAPER'S POSITION

Romanticism, reality of a contemporary Thanksgiving

There is a romanticism to Thanksgiving that involves family members with their heads bowed gathered around turkey dinners, giving thanks.

If that is your Thanksgiving reality, you are blessed indeed.

Long ago, the notion of a quiet day set aside for giving humble gratitude was upstaged by overindulging on comically large Thanksgiving meals, falling under the hypnotic spell of televised football, and planning for the ballyhooed shopping day that follows.

Our austere and miserly forebears, with their humble, understated sensibilities, would not have been impressed.

Here are more Thanksgiving realities: It is one of the country's beloved holidays, but many people will still be working, which hardly seems fair.

While we tuck into a second helping of pumpkin pie, the first responders, cashiers, toll collectors, and others are laboring away on a holiday. We thank them for keeping the world in order while everyone else is off from work.

Further complicating the day is that the Thanksgiving origin story isn't nearly as benevolent as the one taught in elementary school.

A holiday so rooted in eating to excess also shines a stark light on the troubling number of Eastern Shore families who do not get enough to eat.

In some situations, Eastern Shore public schools provide the only food some children receive. During the summer or extended absences from school, children from food-insecure households go hungry.

While holidays like Thanksgiving are associated with gatherings of family and friends, there also are those among us who suffer chronic loneliness.

There are support systems on the Eastern Shore that work to provide help where it is needed. Our community has a well-earned reputation for providing for those in

We hope everyone enjoys a restful, peaceful Thanksgiving. We also hope you honor the blessings in your life by being a blessing to those who need one.

Accomplish more by working together

To the editor:

The Nov. 8 paper position editorial, "Here's a way we can all win — even if your candidate lost" was a balm and very helpful advice to the Eastern Shore community.

It pointed out the value of coming together as a cooperating group and to question efforts to create a red side and a blue side that doesn't respect the other's point of view.

It also reminded us that such a divided community and country obscures our common humanity — and that such a conflict inhibits achieving mutually beneficial goals that are only possible if groups work in consort.

Kudos to the leadership of the Eastern Shore Post for highlighting the most important takeaway from the electoral process.

Accomack NAACP responds to superintendent's termination

BY DAVID A. SABATINO

Guest columnist

With the diversity of our national population and the implementation of civil rights legislation, one would assume that revisiting some conversations we had in the 1960s and 1970s would be unnecessary.

Growing up as an African American on the Eastern Shore during this era, the will to exceed the required standard was instilled in us if we had any aspirations of attaining the American Dream.

We were made aware that though the words are written, America had fallen short of living out the "all men are created equal" part of its creed.

However, this painful reality has not made us bitter — it has made us better.

In the formative years of life, our foreparents taught us the importance of achieving a great education.

If we desired any chance at success, we knew we were going to have to perform twice as well. Before school desegregation, this message was frequently echoed throughout every African American classroom and its transmission has continued to travel through every generation.

Transparently speaking, African Americans rarely feel confident that their advanced academic preparation, tenacity, top-notch job performance, and self-motivation will be sufficient to manifest their visions.

We strive hard to achieve — and if attained, strive even harder to retain, sustain, and maintain.

Successful school districts always inspire their children to pursue their dreams, strive for excellence and greatness, and break through glass ceilings.

Recently a generation of students and our community witnessed something our grandparents and great-grandparents would have only imagined — Accomack County Public Schools hired its first woman and first African American school superintendent.

However, they were immediately awakened by another reality — the battles don't cease when you reach the top; you just learn to fight on another level.

It has been disappointing and grievous to watch the disintegration of racial trust and relations in our area, much of which is not rooted in the promotion of principles but in the wielding of power.

Friendships and relationships have been strained, hearts have been broken, and racial polarization has escalated.

The national climate and culture have descended to the banks of the Eastern Shore and a cluster of people are getting what they want. But at what cost?

Like a raging fire, our local African American public servants and trailblazers have been publicly disgraced, and their achievements devalued to promote and install preferred successors to the positions.

As the local NAACP president and a local pastor, I have tactfully and strategically worked to promote unity, fairness, equity, and justice for all people.

I have avoided addressing matters openly that could be resolved with a personal conversation — with the greatest intent of working together towards a viable solution.

However, we perceive that these efforts have been hindered by individual political interests, personal biases, and thirst for popularity, power, and prestige.

The basic virtues of love, honor, respect, empathy, forgiveness, and compassion have been dismissed and replaced.

Our national president, Derrick Johnson, has stated, "The NAACP will continue to advocate for policies that dismantle systemic injustices and strive to improve the lives of Black Americans and all people."

The Accomack County NAACP offers our continued support for Rhonda Hall based upon our position that she has been treated with contempt, disrespect, and unfairness from the time she sought the office of superintendent, assumed the position, and ultimately was terminated without a defined cause.

We speak out as a testament to the famous words of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. "In the end, we remember not the words of our enemies, but silence of our friends."

■ The writer is president of the Accomack County NAACP.

General Assembly bill seeks to update student cellphone ban

BY CRUZ WALDEN and ANDREW MCGHAN

VCU Capital News Service

Gov. Glenn Youngkin's cellphone ban in K-12 schools will go into effect on Jan. 1, 2025, but some lawmakers want to give localities the option to establish their own policies.

Youngkin issued Executive Order 33 earlier this year, which outlined the reasons behind the ban: Cellphones are a distraction and potentially worsen students' mental health.

The order cites mental health concerns caused by social media use among children, as well as growing suicide and depression rates. Suicide rates have increased 167% since 2010 for girls and 91% for boys, according to the governor's office. Depression rates have spiked 145% for girls and 161% for boys.

Children spend an average of 4.8 hours a day on social media, according to the order. Recent studies indicate more than three hours a day spent on social media doubles the risk of poor mental health for adolescents.

The Virginia Department of Education released its final guidance on Sept. 16. The parameters of the ban were set at "bell-to-bell," which includes between classes and during lunch or recess periods. There are exemptions for students with medical needs in their specialized health care plans, which was included based on feedback.

Sen. Schuyler VanValkenburg, D-Henrico, is a parent and has taught for 20 years — most recently in high school. He has seen the introduction of multiple technologies during his tenure. But the most pivotal technology has been the smartphone, with its apps, he said.

VanValkenburg is co-patron of Senate Bill 738, which requires localities to have a cellphone use policy for public school students but allows them to develop their own rules. The chief patron is Sen. Stella Pekarsky, D-Fairfax. Another co-patron is Sen. Ghazala Hashmi, D-Richmond.

The bill gives districts the option of keeping the bell-to-bell policy set by Youngkin, or loosening it.

Mr. Edward "Eddie" James Moran Sr., 79, of Chincoteague Island, passed away on Nov. 15, 2024, at Tidal Health in Salisbury, Md., surrounded by his family.

Eddie was born in Washington, D.C., on Feb. 4, 1945, to the late Raymond and Dot Merritt. When he was 12 years old, his family moved to Chincoteague Island, where he quickly became friends with J. Wesley Jeffries on the Little League field. Their friendship would last for 70 years.

As a teen, Eddie worked on the water and survived the 1962 Big Flood, which decimated most parts of the island he called home. After graduating high school, he entered the NASA apprenticeship program and eventually was employed by NOAA, from which he retired after 30 years of service.

Never one to sit still, he furthered his employment by becoming a bailiff with the Accomack County Sheriff's Office in the General District Court. He also worked for Shore Transport as an ambulance driver and, most recently, was employed by the Town of Chincoteague as a driver/sprayer for the Mosquito Control Department.

Always one to give back to his community, Eddie was a member of several civic organizations including being a Shriner for over 30 years

Mr. Moran

He was a member of the Christ United Methodist Church, where he was involved with its choir for several years.

In his free time, Eddie loved to cheer on the Washington Football Team, which would always be known to him as the Redskins, and he loved NASCAR. Another favorite thing that he loved was traveling with his wife, Nancy, to Las Vegas to visit with her sister, Libby, and brother-in-law, Bill.

Johnny Downing

It is a Celtic tradition to tell the bees of significant events, as bees are believed to have a connection to the spirit world.

Tell the bees and speak his name! One of the world's greatest lovers of persons and people has left us. Mr. Johnny Downing has passed from this earth after a lengthy illness that stole his gift of gab but not one bit of his sweetness and charm, not one drop of his wit and humor or loving kindness.

The second son of Parks and Peggy Downing, John Edward Downing was born in Nassawadox on March 5, 1950, and was reportedly a sweet baby and sweet boy, excepting mischievous exploits and adolescent adventures that will go down in history among those in the know.

A member of the Class of 1968, Johnny attended Northampton High School and was forever a Yellow Jacket despite having married an Onancock Blue Devil, Cynthia Jean Serini. He continued his education at the College of The Albemarle on a basketball scholarship and earned his Bachelor of Science and master's degrees from ODU and Virginia Tech.

The Downings' parallel careers in education meant that hundreds, more likely thousands, of Eastern Shore youth benefited from their instruction and encouragement. Johnny served as a teacher, director of career and technical education, and principal for Northampton County Public Schools. Johnny's kindness and assistance to many lifelong friends and acquaintances were well known in both his personal and professional lives. He left his mark on everyone's memory who ever knew him.

After retiring from the school system, Johnny worked at Onancock Building Supply, adding to his long roster of friends. He was able to indulge his love of woodworking at home and for others, even creating crafty animals just for the fun of it.

Johnny loved to do many things, but his favorite was spending time with his younger brother, David, often mentioning him on the radio with a "Good morning, David!" He filled his time with volunteering and serving on the board of the Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC), which included organizing their annual fish fry. Other favorites were growing grape tomatoes and making fig preserves with his grandmother's recipe.

Johnny never missed calling Friday night football on WESR or posting the weather report from the Weather Deck at Dingley's Mill, where the kenuten valve was kept under lock and key and he kept watch for the annual sighting of the Pungoteague Possum.

He loved to play golf, pulling pranks, and organizing mystery trips. One of his greatest trips was going to "Pumpkin Chunking."

Johnny is survived by Cyndi, his devoted wife of 49 years; Peggy Boole Downing, his mother; David, his younger brother; Anne, his sister-inlaw; nephews, Clay Downing, Andy Futrell, and Charlie Futrell; godson, Garrett Miles; and Carolyn Upshur and Ernest Upshur, who were his devoted caregiver family; and last of all, Ditto, the "devil cat."

He was predeceased by his father, Parks Abbott, and his older brother, Parks Abbott Jr.

Family and friends will gather for a private service. A public tribute will be held at the Eastern Shore Yacht and Country Club, with the date and time to be announced.

You might honor Johnny by planting a tree or making a donation to St. James' Episcopal Church Memorial Fund (memo: Kitchen Renovation), P.O. Box 540, Accomac, VA 23301; the Eastern Shore Youth Golf Club, 14421 Country Club Road, Melfa, VA 23410; or a charity of your choice.

Nancy Lewis

Mrs. Nancy Carole Perry Lewis, 85, of Wachapreague, wife of the late Zadoc R. Lewis III, passed away on Nov. 18, 2024.

Nancy was born in Philadelphia, where she lived until she was 14 years old. Nancy and her family then moved to Baltimore, where she graduated from Towson High School. Nancy's mother's family was from Chincoteague, and that is where she met her best friend and husband of 63 years, ZR Lewis. Nancy and ZR lived in Baltimore for 20 years with their three children before moving to ZR's hometown of Wachapreague and purchasing the Wachapreague Hotel.

Nancy was a beloved wife, mother, grandmother, and sister, as well as a friend to many. Nancy played an important role behind the scenes helping her husband run the family businesses, The Island House Restaurant and the Wachapreague Motel and Marina, for over 30 years.

When she was not busy working, she enjoyed traveling, family vacations, reading biographies, and completing her many sewing projects. However, Nancy's greatest joy in life was "making memories" with her husband "Ran" and her family. Nancy loved to plan parties and family get-togethers for her children and grandchildren, whom she helped raise as her own. Nancy is remembered, even when she was ill, as having a smile on her face and a positive attitude.

Nancy was the daughter of the late George and Betty Perry, of Baltimore. She is survived by her son, Randy Lewis; daughter, Selina Coulbourne and husband, Mark; and son-in-law, Nat Atkinson, all of Wachapreague; and brother, George Perry, of St. Augustine, Fla. She is also survived by her grandchildren, Hannah Matias (Yariel), Samantha and Sawyer Coulbourne, Tres Atkinson (Mary), and Ciboney, Madison, and Charlie Lewis; and her great-grandchildren, Jordan, Hurley, Scarlett, Levi, Madyson, Oliver, and Aubree.

She was predeceased by her beloved daughter, Susie Lewis Atkinson, grandson, Jared Atkinson, and greatgrandson, Liam Matias.

Funeral services will be conducted Saturday, Nov. 23, at 1 p.m. at Doughty's Funeral Home in Exmore, with Brooks Wallace officiating. Interment will follow in Wachapreague Cemetery. Family will join friends one hour prior to the service at the funeral home. Flowers are accepted or memorial contributions may be made to Hollies Baptist Church, P.O. Box 7, Keller, VA 23401.

Bluefin tuna among offshore catches

If recent reports are any indication, it appears that the shift from the warm-water to the colder-water-tolerant fish species has begun.

from the northern portion of the Chesapeake Bay.

The southern portions of the Shore should continue to enjoy the presence of speckled trout and puppy drum for at least a few more weeks, although some anglers are already starting to target tautog under the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, around the concrete ships, and over the inshore wrecks. Black sea bass are being targeted over the deeper ocean wrecks. Expect to see the arrival of the first oceanic striped bass inside the mouth of the lower bay during the first couple weeks of December.

Upper Shore

Captain CL Marshall, of Tangier Sound Charters, was celebrating the fact that water temperatures have started to fall, hopefully resulting in an influx of striped bass from the more northern portions of the bay. Marshall said that the bulk of the striper reports are coming from up behind Blackwater, in Fishing Bay, and off Hooper Island, all in the Maryland portion of the Chesapeake Bay.

He said that the rockfish that have already made it south into the Pocomoke Sound are still far up inside the creeks, where the water is brackish in composition. He has recently enjoyed success casting and slow trolling bull minnow-colored swim baits along the deeper creek bends and at the mouths of small feeder creeks during the outgoing tide. He plans to start targeting striped bass in 4- to 8-foot depths, especially over structured bottom, in the upcoming week.

Chincoteague

Striped bass catches have come from some of the connecting bridges, with the best action coming during the ebb tide, late in the day and into the evening. Large white Storm lures have been effective on the stripers.

Offshore, schools of bluefin tuna have been popping up in the ocean waters, showing up as close to the beach as Blackfish Banks and as far out as the Jackspot. Most of the tuna have been taken on Islander Lures rigged with large ballyhoo and trolled a long distance behind the boat.

Just a word of caution: Bluefin tuna are a federally managed species with strict regulations regarding size limitations, seasons, and quotas, as well as a required permitting process to target and possess, all of which are strictly enforced.

Wachapreague

Captain Lindsay Paul, aboard the Almost Persuaded, confided that there was not a whole lot of recent angling activity to report, both due to the recent windy conditions and to the shift of a lot of outdoorsmen from fishing to rail hunting during the high tides generated from the recent "Beaver Moon." Captain Paul is still running charters for flounder and puppy drum.

Lower Shore

Tyler Nestor, at Oceans East — Eastern Shore, reported that speck-led trout and puppy drum remain in the lower bay creeks, as well as off the beaches around the north and south pound nets. Most of the anglers who are targeting the trout and drum are casting soft plastics and Mirrolures.

Tautog are being caught along the pilings and rocks of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel and along the concrete ships off Kiptopeke. Chunks of frozen green crabs and blue crabs are the tog's bait of choice. Tyler said that the flounder fishery off Kiptopeke is still producing for anglers drifting live minnow baits. Black sea bass are hitting jigs and cut squid on the ocean wrecks in depths of 75 to 135 feet.

Jeb Brady, at Bailey's Bait & Tackle, described the lower Shore puppy drum fishing as "excellent" on both sides of the peninsula. He said that anglers fishing on the bayside have enjoyed success inside the creeks and along the shorelines while fishing Berkley Gulp soft baits under popping corks.

The puppy drum on the seaside have been found along the marshes. Brady said that a lot of the drum have been undersized, but there are reports of keepers in the 20- to 24-inch slot size.

Schoolie-sized stripers are hitting minnow-mimicking swim baits at night under the pier lights. When the weather allows, tautog fishing along the bridge-tunnel was described as "decent," with chunks of crab being the top bait offering.

Jones, Nandua grad, named first-team All-CIAA Conference

Larry Jones Jr., a 2020 graduate and former football player for Nandua High School, was recently awarded first-team All-CIAA Conference as an offensive lineman.

Jones, of Onley, the son of Lisa Cypress and Larry Jones Sr., plays for the Virginia Union University Panthers, who won the CIAA championship game on Nov. 16.

Virginia Union University will play Wingate University in the first round of the NCAA Division II Football Playoffs at 1 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 23, in Wingate, N.C.

On being named to the first team, Jones said he was "blessed and extremely grateful to earn the honor. It was a tough battle coming back from two knee surgeries, and to see all the hard work pay off was very rewarding."

Though Jones now resides in Richmond, he still thinks about the Shore all the time. He said it motivates him more knowing where he came from and showing people that Shore athletes can achieve great things.

"Many people like to discredit the Eastern Shore, but I am proud to say where I came from," he said.

Larry Jones Jr., of Onley, poses with the CIAA championship trophy on Nov. 16. Jones and the Virginia Union University Panthers defeated Virginia State University, 17-13, to become the 2024 CIAA Conference champions.

At Gifted Visions, a business vision

Heath sells gift baskets, coffee at U.S. Route 13 shop

BY TED SHOCKLEY

Eastern Shore Post

Deborah Heath had a hair salon for 30 years and she worked at Bojangles in Onley for 14 years. So she knows how a business runs and she knows how a restaurant runs.

She has combined her experiences — and added a flourish of her own talent — at Gifted Visions, a gift and coffee shop at 3178 Lankford Highway in Exmore. It opened in July.

The idea to be her own boss at her own shop came after she created a gift basket for a friend.

Her friend suggested that she go into the gift-basket business.

It sounded like a good idea, and as Heath created more gift baskets for friends, they implored her to begin creating them professionally.

At Gifted Visions, there are baskets in stock for all occasions and Heath also is happy to create a basket.

"I love what I do," she said. "I meet new customers every day."

The building also contains a coffee shop featuring hot and iced coffees, hot tea, hot chocolate, and more. There also are grab-and-go food items for sale.

The shop's location is convenient to the highway and the New Road community and is a short walk or drive from downtown Exmore.

Heath said she would like to thank "her family, friends, supporters, and God" for her shop and successes.

Gifted Visions is open Mondays, and Wednesdays through Saturdays, from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. It is closed on Tuesdays and Sundays. Call 757-919-0447.

AGRICULTURE

Counties get drought designation

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has officially designated Accomack and Northampton counties as primary natural disaster areas due to the severe drought and excessive heat experienced since April 16, 2024.

This designation, approved by the Secretary of Agriculture on Nov. 15, allows eligible farmers in these counties to apply for emergency loans and other assistance from the USDA's Farm Service Agency.

Farmers in Accomack and Northampton counties who have suffered significant crop losses due to the ongoing drought and heat conditions are encouraged to apply for assistance.

The USDA's emergency loan program is designed to help producers recover from production and physical losses.

Farmers must have suffered at least a 30% loss in crop production or a physical loss to livestock, livestock products, real estate, or chattel property.

Loans can be used to restore or replace essential property, cover production costs for the next season, pay essential family living expenses, reorganize the farming operation, and refinance certain debts.

Farmers interested in applying for emergency loans or other disaster assistance should contact their local FSA office.

For more information, visit the USDA's website or contact the Accomack County FSA office at 202-720-7641.

School board hires interim superintendent

Councilor Marsh resigns her position

BY JANET BERNOSKY

Eastern Shore Post

Monda Marsh announced her resignation from city council effective Jan. 1 during the Pocomoke City Mayor and City Council meeting on Monday, Nov. 18.

Marsh, who has represented District 3 since she was elected in 2022, cited personal and health reasons as contributing factors to her decision.

Mainly, though, Marsh said she fulfilled the goals she set out to accomplish during her tenure on council and that it was time to step away from public life.

The goals, she said, were to clean up the town and protect the investment made in her own residence and to improve living standards for residents, especially tenants, achieved through the establishment of the rental registration program.

Marsh's other goal included improving the city's infrastructure, which will happen through the newly established Safe Paths Initiative by undertaking needed repairs to derelict roads and sidewalks.

Mayor Todd J. Nock, along with Town Manager John Barkley and councilmembers Diane Downing and Brooke Cottman, wished Marsh well in her future endeavors.

Nock, Marsh, Downing, Cottman, and City Clerk Melinda Stafford were in attendance, remotely.

Barkley, city attorney Andrew Illuminati, and councilmembers C. L. Marshall and Scott Holland were Nock didn't indicate if the remainder of Marsh's term would be filled by an appointment or a special election, or remain unfilled, as his council seat did for an entire year after his election as mayor.

However, he called for a closed session meeting on Monday, Nov. 25.

Code of conduct

Council unanimously approved an ordinance to enact a city code of conduct to establish standards by which the mayor, council, and city employees will interact with each other, city residents, the public at large, the media, and other groups.

A copy of the ordinance is available to read in its entirety in the city hall building located at 101 Clarke St.

'Could use a facelift'

Jermaine Newcomb, a Delmar,

Md., resident, introduced himself as a new real estate investor who recently purchased a vacant lot at 108 Laurel St.

His plans include the construction of a residence on that lot that he plans to then sell to a homeowner at an affordable price.

Newcomb hopes this to be the first of many projects for his company, Renew Realty Investment Team Corporation.

"If you treat me right, I will do more projects," he said to the mayor and council. "Pocomoke could use a facelift."

The mayor wished everyone a Happy Thanksgiving and extended an invitation to attend Pocomoke's 52nd Annual Christmas Parade on Monday, Dec. 2, at 7 p.m.

Tribe's culture, traditions shared at event

BY JANET BERNOSKY

Eastern Shore Post

Members of the nonprofit group Pocomoke Indian Nation recently spoke about their tribe's history, culture, and traditions to an audience gathered at the Worcester County Public Library branch in Pocomoke City.

According to member and volunteer Cheryl Doughty, European colonial settlers found thriving communities of native people living in what is now considered the lower Eastern Shore of Maryland down into the northern areas of present-day Accomack County.

United under the Pocomoke tribe, which was considered to be the "paramount" or ruling tribe, this nation consisted of many subtribes, including the Gingoteagues near Horntown, the Annemessex near Crisfield, the Nusswattux near Snow Hill, and the Acquintica, living to the north and west of the Pocomoke River.

The people of the subtribes lived in established settlements or towns, all loval to the king of the Pocomoke Paramountcy.

One such king, according to Doughty, was Wasange, later baptized and known as Daniel. Court records show him, along with Knosulm, Emperor of the Assateagues, entering into a treaty for protection with the Maryland colony in 1722.

to live in certain smaller areas, or reservations.

Today, descendants of the Pocomoke tribe rely on early court or church records, obituaries, first-person histories, and land patents from the 17th century and beyond to learn more precisely about who their ancestors were and what was happening to them as they interacted with the new European settlements.

get their knees?", created to provide explanations of what happened in the natural world or the spiritual realm.

The Pocomoke tribes also named their full moons, Doughty explained, to correspond to cycles for planting, harvesting, hunting, and fishing, as well as certain seasons. Traditionally, the 13 full moons of the year are also linked to the 13 smaller shells on a turtle's back.

Brenda Howard spoke of the value of the cattail plant, used from tip to root, for sustenance, fuel, torches, and shelter. She later demonstrated how to weave mats, which were used for sleeping and wigwam construction, from cattail stalks.

The audience was invited to participate in weaving and corn-grinding, along with traditional craft projects.

Members of the Pocomoke Indian Nation are available for lectures and workshops geared toward various audiences.

Injured bald eagle returns to the wild after rehab

BY STELLA DAWSON

Special to the Eastern Shore Post

Dr. Meg Gammage-Tucker pulled on a long leather falconer's glove and pulled back the orange cloth printed with the word "Freedom."

The bald eagle batted its body against the sides of the cage. Gammage-Tucker slipped the latch. The door swung open.

The bird reared upward inside the crate. The eagle lunged forward, head low, eyes fierce, its dark brown body, broad wings bent high.

Then, wings outstretched, he launched.

His bright yellow talons almost grazed the ground, and the eagle drew his huge wings back tight into his body, then upward and outward again.

Beating the air in huge arcs, the eagle gained altitude, cleared the fence railing, veered left and over the switchgrass, over the cypress, and over the tops of the scrubby loblolly pines, and into the blue sky.

The Wildlife Center of Virginia released the 5-year-old male bald eagle at Mutton Hunk Fen Natural Preserve on the Eastern Shore on Oct. 31, two months after the raptor was found unable to fly near the Tyson Foods Inc. chicken processing plant in Temperanceville.

"We don't know what had happened to him. But we found oil on his wings and he was very emaciated," Gammage-Tucker said.

Wildlife rehabilitator Gay Frazee captured the bird on Aug. 27 and transferred him to the Wildlife Center in Waynesboro for treatment.

His feathers were in very poor condition, but the veterinary team did not find any injuries, Gammage-Tucker said.

The vet staff cleaned the eagle and provided fluids, food, and supportive care while his feather condition improved.

By mid-September, he was ready to fly and began daily exercises for muscle conditioning in an outdoor flight pen until he had built up sufficient stamina to survive in the wild

Eagle #24-3548 was the fourth eagle the Wildlife Center has returned to the wild so far this year.

About 50 have been brought in for treatment so far this year and about one-third usually can be rehabilitated and released, preferably in territory near to where they were found, said Connor Gillespie, director of outreach at the Wildlife Center.

The other eagles are either humanely euthanized because they were too injured to recover or are still undergoing treatment, he said.

The not-for-profit center also treats owls, hawks, songbirds, squirrels, opossums, and even black bears — any wild creature native to the state.

While this eagle displayed no signs of specific ailments, bald eagles face a range of threats in the wild.

Gammage-Tucker said about 75% of the injured raptors brought to the center show some lead poisoning caused by ingesting fish or wildlife contaminated by lead used in fishing tackle and bullets, and of those, one-quarter show very high levels.

One study published in "Wildlife Management" estimates that lead accounts for 4% to 6% of premature deaths among bald eagles, reduces fertility in females, and affects the resiliency of their eggs. She urged the roughly 40 people attending the eagle release to use copper alternatives when fishing or hunting.

Since eagles are opportunistic, feeding not only on small mammals and fish but also on carrion, they are susceptible to parasitic infections.

Additionally, avian flu H5N1 virus is spreading amongst raptors in North America, causing increased death rates in some regional populations.

In the Chesapeake Bay region, which includes the Eastern Shore, bald eagles are plentiful.

In the last count conducted by Virginia in 2020, there were roughly 3,000 breeding pairs, up from 1,000 in 2016, a remarkable comeback from roughly 60 breeding pairs when the agricultural chemical DDT was banned in 1972, according to the Chesapeake Bay Program, a regional partnership dedicated to restoration of the bay.

In fact, the region has the highest density of bald eagles in the lower 48 states.

The multitude of streams, rivers, and inlets in the region provide plentiful freshwater and saltwater fish for eagles to eat, while the forest hosts small mammals and provides excellent habitat for protection and nesting. However, increased development pressures are leading to loss of habitat and runoff pollutes water sources, raising the threat level for the national bird of the United States.

Three populations of bald eagles live in the region — year-round residents, summer migratory eagles from the Southeast, and winter migratory eagles from the Northeast.

They reach maturity at around 4 or 5 years old, when their heads turn from mottled black and brown to white.

Bald eagles will establish a territory and mate for life, building huge nests of sticks high in the branches of

The nests can stretch 6 feet across and sometimes weigh hundreds of pounds as the eagles add more sticks

They will line their nests with fresh green leaves, pine needles or even seaweed to cushion and insulate them before the female lays a clutch of two to three eggs in February in the Chesapeake area.

After 34 to 36 days, the chicks hatch with a coat of down. The male eagle does most of the hunting, while the female stays near the nest protecting her brood and doing most of their feeding.

The chicks begin to hop around and flap their wings at one month old, but they will stay near the nest for five to six months until they have learned to fly and hunt for themselves.

As Eagle #24-3548 was readied for his return to the wild, another bald eagle soared on a thermal overhead. circling high against the cloudless

Gammage-Tucker waited until the eagle had faded into the distance before opening the cage.

Within seconds there was a whoosh of his huge wings, and he was gone. He was free once more, returned to the wild.

POCOMOKE CITY

Grants could help sidewalks

BY JANET BERNOSKY

Eastern Shore Post

Pocomoke City's District 5 Councilmember C. L. Marshall and Dan Brandewie, Pocomoke's planning director, recently met with Will White, a transportation planner and consultant with the national engineering firm Mead & Hunt.

Among other things, White was invited to discuss grant resources available to improve city sidewalks, as well as for the construction of safe pedestrian and bike paths.

Marshall indicated this likely will initially involve a town-wide safety study, which could explore street light options and also compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act for things like sidewalk curb cuts to make them wheelchair accessible.

At some point, the public will also be invited to share its input to help prioritize projects.

Some of this will overlap with the city's Safe Paths Initiative, particularly in the area of Pocomoke High School.

"Much of Pocomoke's planned growth will take place south of Old Virginia Road," Marshall said.

"Providing pedestrian and bike paths, along with marked crosswalks, along this road is critical to keeping our students safe."

Prior to joining Mead & Hunt, White was a transportation manager for the City of Salisbury, overseeing the streets and sidewalks within its city limits, including funding requests.

Retailers selling hemp products must apply for retail registration by Dec. 31

Retail locations that sell a hemp product intended for smoking or an edible hemp product must obtain a Hemp Product Retail Facility Registration before Dec. 31.

The application for a retail facility registration will be available starting Nov. 15 through the Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Office of Hemp Enforcement.

This registration requirement comes into effect following changes that the General Assembly made to Virginia's Industrial Hemp Law in 2023.

The VDACS Office of Hemp Enforcement is publicizing this change to ensure all establishments that sell edible or smokable hemp products comply with the law.

Requirements include but are not limited to:

- A Regulated Hemp Product Retail Facility Registration shall be required for each location that offers retail sales of these regulated hemp products.
- As required by law, a nonrefundable annual registration fee of $1,000 shall be required with each application for a regulated hemp product retail facility registration.
- Each registration issued shall be valid for a period of one year from the date of issuance and may be renewed in successive years. Each annual renewal shall require the payment of the nonrefundable annual registration fee.

In order to offer for sale a regulated hemp product in Virginia, an establishment must submit the Regulated Hemp Product Retail Facility Registration Application to VDACS and pay the $1,000 annual fee.

Applications may be submitted to the Office of Hemp Enforcement by mail or electronically.

Mailed applications must include a check or money order, while online application payments can be made electronically.

Registrations will be issued in the order in which the application was received, and applicants will receive confirmation once an application and fee has been properly verified by the VDACS Office of Hemp Enforcement.

A hemp product retailer found to be offering for sale regulated hemp products without submitting a Hemp Product Retail Facility Registration Application after Dec. 31 may face a civil penalty of $2,000 initially. Retailers found to be in repeat violation of the facility registration requirement may be assessed additional, increased civil penalties.

Strange But True

By Lucie Winborne

* Cotton candy was invented in 1895 by candy maker John C. Wharton and dentist William Morrison, who called it "fairy floss" and sold thousands of servings at the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904. It was renamed "cotton candy" in the 1920s by Josef Lascaux — another dentist — who sold the saccharine confection to his patients. Hmmm, sounds a little bit suspicious to us.
